NAPLES—King greets 20,000 Italian legionnaires returning from Spain.

MADRID—Nationalist authorities ask general public to denounce persons suspected of "criminal acts" during or after the Republican regime.

LONDON—Naval experts believe sunken submarine Thetis may be beached by Friday so that "full public inquiry" promised by Chamberlain could be started Monday.

Heroes' Welcome

(By The Associated Press)

Italy and Germany today gave heroes' welcomes to troops returning from helping Generalissimo Franco win the Spanish civil war. Adolf Hitler, reviewing 18,000 German fighters back from Spain, disclosed that Franco had asked him for help in the first month of the civil war—July, 1936—and "I decided to aid him."

Hitler and his chief aide, Field Marshal Goering, reviewed the veterans' parade which gave the first concrete evidence of the extent of German assistance to Nationalist Spain. Returned 4,700 and 5,000 of the marchers returned to Germany last week, about 10,000 had returned previously and 3,000 were sailors.

Italy's returning legionnaires were greeted in Naples by King Vittorio Emanuele as they departed, 20,000 strong, with a contingent of visiting Spanish troops and officials.

Generalissimo Franco's brother-in-law and interior minister, Ramon Serrano Suner, stood near the king. There were indications his visit might be taken as an opportunity for talks with Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano on Spanish-Italian relations.

Appeal to Public

While the foreign legionnaires were being welcomed in Germany and Italy, authorities in Nationalist Spain appealed to the public to denounce persons suspected of "criminal acts" during or after the Republican regime and political information service estimated that 15,000 persons had been seized since the fall of Madrid March 28 on charges of assassination, robbery, treason, arson and sacking churches.

Relations between Soviet Russia and Japan took a new turn when Japanese-dominated Manchoukuo sent a protest to Russia charging Soviet troops with violating the Manchoukuo frontier where there has been intermittent fighting for a month.

Manchoukuo demanded "immediate discontinuance of this challenging attitude." A dispatch to the Tokyo newspaper Asahi reported Japanese and Soviet troops had fought a three-hour battle yesterday near Changkufeng, border scene of last summer's "vest-pocket" war between the two powers.

Champion No-Man

Justice McReynolds Keeps His Title; Butler Is Second in Rating

Washington, June 6 (AP)—Justice James C. McReynolds, 77, retains the title of champion dissenter of the Supreme Court. During the eight-month term that ended yesterday he disagreed with the majority of colleagues in 34 opinions. This gave him the leadership for the third consecutive year.

The runner-up was 72-year-old Justice Pierce Butler, who declined to join in 32 majority opinions.

McReynolds and Butler are the only members of the court described by Roosevelt administration officials as "conservatives." Both are Democrats. McReynolds was attorney general in the Wilson cabinet.

They became prominent as dissenters during the 1936-37 term when the court upheld the administration in most instances.

Steelworker Held After Shooting at Duchess of Kent

Scotland Yard Investigates Terrorist Angle After Belgrave Square Act Against Marina

MARINA, DUCHESS OF KENT

London, June 6 (AP)—A 45-year-old steelworker was charged by police today with illegal possession of a loaded firearm "with intent to endanger life or property" in connection with the firing of a shotgun last night at the automobile of the Duchess of Kent.

Ledwidge Vincent Lawlor, described as a welder's assistant, was formally charged after all night questioning at a police station. He was directed to appear later in the day at Westminster police court.

In formal language, the charge read "that he did on June 5 at Belgrave Square (residence of the Duchess) have in his possession a firearm and ammunition with intent by means thereof to endanger life or cause serious injury to property contrary to the firearms act of 1937."

The bald, rather stocky prisoner, wearing an inexpensive double-breasted suit and shielding his face with a fedora hat, was brought out of the Gerald police station by two uniformed officers and a detective.

Rogers' Tribute

His Statue in Capitol

Washington, June 6 (AP)—The great and small of the capital paid eloquent tribute today to Will Rogers—a man who endeared himself to the world by being himself.

Midway between the marble likenesses of George Washington and Alexander Hamilton in the Capitol's famed rotunda, friends of the cowboy-humorist gathered to unveil a striking bronze statue executed by Jo Davidson.

The statue shows Rogers in one of his characteristic poses—hands in his pockets and his eyes squinting. His tie is hanging from his collar, and his double-breasted coat is fastened on the lowest button.

The ceremony came 22 years after Oklahoma's first nominee to Statuary Hall—Sequoyah—was presented to the federal government. Sequoyah was a Cherokee Indian, and Rogers was one-fourth Cherokee—the one thing in his life of which he seriously boasted.

Not Once, but Twice

Olyphant, Pa., June 6 (AP)—An electrical storm fouled the town's telephone system, causing phones to ring simultaneously in 2,500 homes. Operators nearly talked themselves hoarse explaining to subscribers. Hardly had they finished when telephones rang a second time and the weary operators had to go through the explanation again.

Will Appear for Hearing

Lexington, Ky., June 6 (AP)—Archie H. Carpenter, 35, of Lexington, arrested on a Rockland county, N. Y., fugitive warrant, charging grand larceny in oil stock sales, will appear before Governor A. B. Chandler in Frankfort Saturday for an extradition hearing. He is free on $2,000 bail.

Outlawed Irish Republican Held By U.S. Officials

Detroit, June 6 (AP)—On the exact day that King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were coming within virtually a step of United States soil, Sean Russell, a reputed leader of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, was held a federal prisoner here today.

Secretive officers kept Russell, Irish orator, incommunicado in a federal detention building where he had been placed after his arrest late yesterday for an unexplained reason. He was arrested just after he had stepped off a train from Chicago.

The King and Queen, speeding their last miles through Canada, are due to reach Windsor, Ont., just across the Detroit river from this city, early tonight and will make a brief stop before going on to Niagara Falls.

Russell, whose reputed chief-of-staff post with the Irish Republican Army gave rise to reports Scotland Yard wanted him back from America because of the recent bombings in England, was placed under arrest as he was about to enter a taxi-cab. He has been on a lecture tour of the United States.

Federal Agents Arrest

A companion, identifying himself as Joseph McGarrity of Philadelphia, said three federal officers approached them in front of the Michigan Central Railroad station and calmly took custody of Russell. McGarrity said he himself was "not wanted."

What the charge was, if any, was not made public. Officers firmly insisted there was "nothing to say."

Russell had been in custody approximately six hours before word of it leaked out. He was arrested some time between 4:30 and 5 p. m. (EST).

When the arrest became known, an Irish-American group here quickly engaged counsel for him. The case was given Attorney Thomas F. Chawke, prominent criminal lawyer, neither counsel nor friends were permitted to see Russell during the night.

McGarrity would submit only to the briefest interview. He said he and Russell had known nothing beyond newspaper reports of the latter's contemplated extradition to England.

"We just laughed at it," McGarrity said.

Arrest Mystery

The responsibility for the arrest meanwhile remained a mystery. Officers would not comment. The state department at Washington said it had had no request for extradition.

McGarrity said Russell has been in the United States five or six weeks on a "legal passport."

When Russell was in Los Angeles last May 31, the British line office was authoritatively reported to be considering efforts to extradite him.

No charges were divulged. The contemplated extradition, however, was understood to be based on the wave of bombings in England attributed to the I. R. A.

Would Arrest Drivers

Albany, N. Y., June 6 (AP)—State Motor Vehicle Commissioners Carroll E. Mealey, estimating "thousands of persons" were operating automobiles on terminated driving licenses today asked police to "take such action as is necessary." He reported 966 or 68 per cent of the 1,420 licenses, which expired during March had not been renewed.

Gay Decorations Sprout Along Historic Pennsylvania Avenue at Nation's Capital

Washington, June 6 (AP)—The steel gray lamp posts along historic Pennsylvania Avenue were sprouting red, white and blue British and American flags today, first visible evidence of the two-day pageant of good will honoring the king and queen of England.

From Union Station, where the royal couple will arrive Thursday morning, to the White House, where they will stay overnight, banners and bunting were being hung.

Decorations will be completed tomorrow when shields bearing the United States coat of arms and others inscribed "GRE"—George Rex Elizabeth—are put in place beneath the flags.

Secretary of State Hull and Sir Ronald Lindsay, the British ambassador, will leave tonight to greet the royal visitors at Niagara Falls when they cross into this country from Canada tomorrow night.

Ship Rescues Flier Lost 250 Miles Out on Atlantic

Chatham, Mass., June 6 (AP)—Apparently lost 250 miles at sea, Chatham Eshelman, student flier of Carlisle, Pa., was rescued after bringing his two-place, high-wing monoplane down on the Georges Fishing Banks within sight of at least three Boston fishing trawlers.

Fishermen aboard the trawler Villanova hauled him to safety just before the plane sank in water 40 fathoms deep.

Eshelman left Camden, N. J., airport last night with only sufficient gasoline for 175 miles of flying, was sighted at 6 a. m. (E. D. T.) by the trawler Storm. Shortly thereafter the pilot dropped a message asking the direction of the nearest land.

The rescue was reported by the trawler Triton, which said her crew was dragging for the ship.

Refugees' Liner Sails for Germany

Passenger Traffic Manager Says Ship Taking Its Exiles Back Home

New York, June 6 (AP)—The Hamburg-American Liner St. Louis with more than 900 Jewish refugees from Germany aboard was reported by officials of the line today to be en route back to Hamburg.

The vessel was ordered out of Havana harbor after Cuban officials denied the passengers admission. Later she cruised aimlessly in Caribbean waters and it subsequently was reported the refugees would be landed at the Isle of Pines off the Cuban coast.

E. H. Dedrick, passenger traffic manager of the ship line, said, however, the St. Louis had been on its way back to Germany since Sunday.

"We had a radio from Captain William Schroeder, of the St. Louis yesterday, telling us he had turned around and was on his way back to Hamburg," Dedrick said, "and this morning we have a cable from the main office in Hamburg confirming that statement."

Dedrick said the St. Louis, a motor ship, had refueled and re-provisioned at Havana, and there was no danger of a food shortage on the return voyage. Asked what would become of the refugees (Continued on Page Five)

Lewis Asks Bill Against 'Abuses'

Tells That Coal Operator Boasted of Arms Owned by His Company

Washington, June 6 (AP)—CIO President John L. Lewis asked Congress today to enact "without delay" a measure denying federal loans, contracts and subsidies to industrial employers who use spies, strikebreakers and armed guards against organized labor.

Within recent weeks, Lewis testified, "a West Virginia coal operator in a hotel in the city of Washington boasted in the presence of members of Congress that his corporation had five machine guns, rifles, ammunition, and nauseating gas, and that he expected to use those to shoot himself some miners in the month of May."

"A ghastly contribution!" commented Lewis, who is president of the United Mine Workers.

It was Lewis' latest attempt to win congressional support for the "blacklist" in labor legislation against what he termed anti-union employers.

To broaden its application, he suggested that loans, contracts and subsidies also be denied violators of the Wagner labor act.

His proposals were contained in a statement for the Senate labor committee in support of a bill by Senator LaFollette (Prog.-Wis.) to outlaw use of spies, guards and munitions in industrial disputes.

The agriculture department is cultivating the palm as a decorative tree for semi-tropical areas of the country.

EDWARD J. NOBLE

Washington, June 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt today nominated Edward J. Noble of Connecticut, a Republican business man and former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to the post of undersecretary of commerce.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Admiral William D. Leahy to be Governor of Puerto Rico, a post given added importance by the government's recent decision to establish a new department of defense in the Caribbean area.

Commerce department officials have said Noble would be Secretary Hopkins' right-hand man in efforts to promote business improvement.

Admiral Leahy, retiring chief of naval operations, was nominated to succeed Blanton Winship as governor of Puerto Rico. The White House announced that Mr. Roosevelt had accepted Governor Winship's resignation yesterday.

Apparently assuming that Leahy would be confirmed by the Senate presidential aides he would take over as governor on September 1. Headquarters of the new defense department will be in Puerto Rico.

To be regional director of region 3 of the public works administration, Mr. Roosevelt nominated Harry A. Wortham of Kentucky.

Stephen Hyatt, Pine Hill Principal, Goes to School No. 1, Succeeding Rignall

Secret Ballot

All Appointments Unanimous Except for Daughters of Trustee

Raymond Rignall, who has been serving as principal of School No. 1, was appointed to the principalship of School No. 8, to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of John H. Garrison who retires at the close of the present school year after serving the city for a quarter of a century. Stephen Hyatt of this city, who has been principal of the Pine Hill school, was named by the board as principal at No. 1.

Four other vacancies in the grade schools were filled by appointment. Henrietta Katz was named to fill a vacancy at No. 4; Harold Darling was named to No. 7; Anna Whitbeck to No. 2, and Julietta M. Netter, a former teacher in the schools of this city, was re-appointed to fill a vacancy at No. 5. Mrs. Netter has not been teaching recently but is fully certified by the State Department and will take a summer course to bring her methods to date.

Secret Ballot

All of the appointments were unanimous with the exception of the appointment of Miss Katz, a daughter of Vice President Charles Katz of the Board of Education, who was appointed after a secret ballot had been cast in which but one opposing vote was cast. The vote was taken not because of any thought of inability of the candidate but because Trustee Hutton stated that in appointing a close relative of a board member the board might be setting a "bad precedent." He stated that he held none but the highest regards for Miss Katz and Trustee Katz and he knew that the appointment was being made on ability but he felt that such an appointment at this time would lend weight to a "bad precedent" and he objected to the recommendation of appointment by the Teachers' Committee on the grounds that its confirmation by the board would be an "opening wedge" allowing at some future time the possible appointment of a close relative of a member of the board who might not be so worthy. He held that this might at some future time tend to lower the standard of the teaching staff. Mr. Hutton stated that he was not taking this attitude as a personal matter in the present case but was stating his position in regard to any and all appointments where close relatives of board members might be involved.

In accordance with a motion of Trustee Haver, a secret ballot was taken on the recommendation of the teachers' committee on the appointment of Miss Katz but the board voted unanimously to adopt the balance of the committee report.

Explains Action

Trustee Hutton in stating his position said: "I am casting my vote against the recommendation of the teachers' committee as to the appointment of Miss Katz to fill a vacancy in one of the grade schools. My reason for so doing is that I do not believe that the appointment of close relatives of members of the board of education to employment by the board is harmonious with sound civic practice. While I have no criticism of the qualifications of the (Continued on Page Five)

Mass Meeting

Groups Plan Meeting at Jersey City Friday; Thomas to Speak

Jersey City, N. J., June 6 (AP)—The American Civil Liberties Union and allied groups mapped new plans today for a mass meeting in this political stronghold of Mayor Frank Hague.

Friday night was set as the time for an ACLU-sponsored meeting in Journal Square or some other section of the city from which they had been repeatedly barred by Hague's administration.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader who was evicted from Journal Square 14 months ago when he attempted a street speech without a permit, announced he would speak.

Hague, with whom ACLU officials planned to confer today or tomorrow regarding the meeting, promised he would "implicitly" obey the U. S. Supreme Court's nullification yesterday of a city ordinance under which officials prevented CIO mass meetings.

While the foreign legionnaires were being welcomed in Germany and Italy, authorities in Nationalist Spain appealed to the public to denounce persons suspected of "criminal acts" during or after the Republican regime.

Ship Rescues Flier Lost 250 Miles Out on Atlantic

Chatham, Mass., June 6 (AP)—Apparently lost 250 miles at sea, Cheston Eshelman, student flier of Carlisle, Pa., was rescued after bringing his two-place, high-wing monoplane down on the Georges Fishing Banks within sight of at least three Boston fishing trawlers.

Fishermen aboard the trawler Villanova hauled him to safety just before the plane sank in water 40 fathoms deep.

Eshelman left Camden, N. J., airport last night with only sufficient gasoline for 175 miles of flying, was sighted at 6 a. m. (E. D. T.) by the trawler Storm. Shortly thereafter the pilot dropped a message asking the direction of the nearest land.

The rescue was reported by the trawler Triton, which said her crew was dragging the ship.

Refugees' Liner Sails for Germany

Passenger Traffic Manager Says Ship Taking Its Exiles Back Home

New York, June 6 (AP)—The Hamburg-American Liner St. Louis with more than 900 Jewish refugees from Germany aboard was reported by officials of the line today to be en route back to Hamburg.

The vessel was ordered out of Havana harbor after Cuban officials denied the passengers admission. Later she cruised aimlessly in Caribbean waters and it subsequently was reported the refugees would be landed at the Isle of Pines off the Cuban coast.

E. H. Dedrick, passenger traffic manager of the ship line, said, however, the St. Louis had been on its way back to Germany since Sunday.

"We had a radio from Captain William Schroeder, of the St. Louis, yesterday, telling us he had turned around and was on his way back to Hamburg," Dedrick said, "and this morning we have a cable from the main office in Hamburg confirming that statement."

Dedrick said the St. Louis, a motor ship, had refueled and re-provisioned at Havana, and there was no danger of a food shortage on the return voyage. Asked what would become of the refugees

Lewis Asks Bill Against 'Abuses'

Tells That Coal Operator Boasted of Arms Owned by His Company

Washington, June 6 (AP)—CIO President John L. Lewis asked Congress today to enact "without delay" a measure denying federal loans, contracts and subsidies to industrial employers who use spies, strikebreakers and armed guards against organized labor.

Within recent weeks, Lewis testified, "a West Virginia coal operator in a hotel in the city of Washington boasted in the presence of members of Congress that his corporation had five machine guns, rifles, ammunition, and nauseating gas, and that he expected to use those to shoot himself some miners in the month of May."

"A ghastly contribution" commented Lewis, who is president of the United Mine Workers.

It was Lewis' latest attempt to win congressional support for the "blacklist" in labor legislation against what he termed anti-union employers.

To broaden its application, he suggested that loans, contracts and subsidies also be denied to violators of the Wagner labor act.

His proposals were contained in a statement for the Senate labor committee in support of a bill by Senator LaFollette (Prog.-Wis.) to outlaw use of spies, guards and munitions in industrial disputes.

Those arraigned on the possession of policy slip charges and who through their attorney N. LeVan Haver pleaded not guilty were: John Stanfort of Kingston, charged with a violation on March 24; Robert Roosa, possession on March 24; Daniel Pope, possession on May 10; Cleveland Thomas, possession on April 13; Jesse Davis, possession on May 11 and James W. Henri, charged with possession on May 10 and May 11. Henri was the only one against whom two charges were filed.

In each case Mr. Haver asked that he be given 10 days to make further motions, that bail be continued and that he be supplied with a copy of the indictment.

To Perpetuate Name

Washington, June 6 (AP)—The name of Franklin D. Roosevelt was assured today of perpetuation in scientific literature. The latinized version "Rooseveltia Franklina" was given by Smithsonian institution experts to a palm tree discovered on tiny Cocos Island, off the west coast of South America, during the President's cruise a year ago. The agriculture department is cultivating the palm as a decorative tree for semi-tropical areas of the country.

Roosevelt Selects Edward J. Noble For New Position

President Also Nominates Admiral W. D. Leahy to Governorship of Puerto Rico

EDWARD J. NOBLE

Washington, June 6 (AP)—President Roosevelt today nominated Edward J. Noble of Connecticut, a Republican business man and former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, to the post of undersecretary of commerce.

Mr. Roosevelt also nominated Admiral William D. Leahy to be Governor of Puerto Rico, a post given added importance by the government's recent decision to establish a new department of defense in the Caribbean area.

Comments department officials have said Noble would be Secretary Hopkins' right-hand man in efforts to promote business improvement.

Admiral Leahy, retiring chief of naval operations, was nominated to succeed Blanton Winship as governor of Puerto Rico. The White House announced that Mr. Roosevelt had accepted Governor Winship's resignation yesterday.

Apparently assuming that Leahy would be confirmed by the Senate, presidential aides he would take over as governor on September 1. Headquarters of the new defense department will be in Puerto Rico.

To be regional director of region 3 of the public works administration, Mr. Roosevelt nominated Harry A. Wortham of Kentucky.

The officer stopped his car and got out but the boys ran away. Officer Kinch made an investigation and ascertained the names of the boys, one 10 and the other 8 years of age, and took possession of the air rifles, informing the parents of the boys of the incident.

Dempsey's Reputation Acknowledged by Jury

New York, June 6 (AP)—Jack Dempsey's reputation as a devastating puncher was credited today with saving him $3,000.

Dempsey was sued for that amount by Charles McFarland, 135-pound negro bootblack, who contended the former heavyweight champ slugged him in a barber shop.

"If I had socked this little guy he wouldn't be here to tell this story," Dempsey told the jury, which promptly returned a verdict in Jack's favor.

Stephen Hyatt, Pine Hill Principal, Goes to School No. 1, Succeeding Rignall

Secret Ballot

All Appointments Unanimous Except for Daughter of Trustee

Raymond Rignall, who has been serving as principal of School No. 1, was appointed to the principalship of School No. 8, to fill a vacancy caused by the resignation of John H. Garrison who retires at the close of the present school year after serving the city for a quarter of a century. Stephen Hyatt of this city, who has been principal of the Pine Hill school, was named by the board as principal at No. 1.

Four other vacancies in the grade schools were filled by appointment. Henrietta Katz was named to fill a vacancy at No. 4; Harold Darling was named to No. 7; Anna Whitbeck to No. 2, and Julietta M. Netter, a former teacher in the school of this city, was re-appointed to fill a vacancy at No. 5. Mrs. Netter has not been teaching recently but is fully certified by the State Department and will take a summer course to bring her methods to date.

Secret Ballot

All of the appointments were unanimous with the exception of the appointment of Miss Katz, a daughter of Vice President Charles Katz of the Board of Education, who was appointed after a secret ballot had been cast in which but one opposing vote was cast. The vote was taken not because of any thought of inability of the candidate but because Trustee Hutton stated that in appointing a close relative of a board member the board might be setting a "bad precedent." He stated that he held none but the highest regards for Miss Katz and Trustee Katz and he knew that the appointment was being made on ability but he felt that such an appointment at this time would lend weight to a "bad precedent" and he objected to the recommendation of appointment by the Teachers' Committee on the grounds that its confirmation by the board would be an "opening wedge" allowing at some future time the possible appointment of a close relative of a member of the board who might not be so worthy. He held that this might at some future time tend to lower the standard of the teaching staff. Mr. Hutton stated that he was not taking this attitude as a personal matter in the present case but was stating his position in regard to any and all appointments where close relatives of board members might be involved.

In accordance with a motion of Trustee Haver, a secret ballot was taken on the recommendation of the teachers' committee on the appointment of Miss Katz but the board voted unanimously to adopt the balance of the committee report.

Explains Action

Trustee Hutton in stating his position said: "I am casting my vote against the recommendation of the teachers' committee as to the appointment of Miss Katz to fill a vacancy in one of the grade schools. My reason for so doing is that I do not believe that the appointment of close relatives of members of the board of education to employment by the board is harmonious with sound civic practice. While I have no criticism of the qualifications of the

Mass Meeting

Groups Plan Meeting at Jersey City Friday; Thomas to Speak

Jersey City, N. J., June 6 (AP)—The American Civil Liberties Union and allied groups mapped new plans today for a mass meeting in this political stronghold of Mayor Frank Hague.

Friday night was set as the time for an ACLU-sponsored meeting in Journal Square or some other section of the city from which they had been repeatedly barred by Hague's administration.

Norman Thomas, Socialist leader who was evicted from Journal Square 14 months ago when he attempted a street speech without a permit, announced he would speak.

Hague, with whom ACLU officials planned to confer today or tomorrow regarding the meeting, promised he would "implicitly" obey the U. S. Supreme Court's nullification yesterday of a city ordinance under which officials prevented CIO mass meetings.

Noyes Seeking Revival of Pact For Milk Industry

New York, June 6 (AP)—Revival of a federal-state milk marketing compact—presaging higher retail prices—will be sought at a conference here today between Holton V. Noyes, state agricultural commissioner, and federal officials.

By a 5 to 4 decision, the U. S. Supreme Court yesterday upheld the federal act on which the agreement for the New York metropolitan district was based.

Noyes, O. E. Roe, chief of the dairy industry division of the Federal Department of Agriculture, and E. M. Harmon, federal administrator of the pact which became inoperative February 1, were to attend the meeting.

Since suspension of the pact after an adverse decision in lower courts, milk prices to producers dropped, in one instance, from $1.88 a hundredweight in January to $1.05 in April. The Grade B retail price in New York dropped 2½ cents a quart for home delivery.

The supreme court decision approved the setting of minimum and equalization of prices paid to producers whose sales outlets might be poorer than those of competitors.

Commissioner Noyes said he anticipated early cessation of "the cut-throat price cutting in the industry" and that he regarded the equalization phase of the decision as "most important."

Noyes said the New York system could be reinstated by reviving the former milk order or substituting a new one. He did not say how long a time might be required.

While the commissioner predicted that the decision would avert threatened milk "strikes," Jefferson county dairy farmers union members continued at Watertown, N. Y., their plans to strike for prices of $1.50 a hundredweight for June, $1.75 for July, and $2 for August.

"The farmers are more interested in prices than in legal aspects of the fight," declared Archie Wright, union head.

Court Order Sets Appraisal Rates

Justice Harry E. Schirick has signed an order fixing the amount of compensation and the expense accounts of the three commissioners of appraisal in connection with their last report on awards made by Delaware Section No. 6 commission which was filed May 26, 1939. The commissioners are Arthur Butler Graham, Samuel E. Aronowitz and E. Frank Flanagan, who heard New York city water-works claims arising out of the construction of the Rondout project.

The court allows each of the commissioners the sum of $3,100 for services and Mr. Graham is allowed $665.41 expenses. Mr. Aronowitz $238.47 and E. Frank Flanagan $176.06.

Dana B. Hellings, grand master of Masons of the state of New York, has announced his appointment of Masonic officials and committees. Arthur D. Lamb of Saugerties is named district deputy grand master of the Greene, Ulster, Masonic district and Roger H. Loughran of Kingston is a member of the committee on endowments. Jay O. Rites Held Today For Mrs. Slauson

Funeral services for Mrs. Emilie Carpenter Slauson, widow of Austin M. Slauson, were held from the family residence, 61 Maiden Lane, this afternoon at 3 o'clock and were in charge of the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemool, pastor of the First Dutch Reformed Church of this city, and Dr. Frank Oliver Hal, pastor of the Church of Divine Paternity, New York city. Burial was in Wiltwyck cemetery.

Born at Harrison, Westchester county, a daughter of Thomas and Jane Carpenter, Mrs. Slauson had resided in this city about 30 years, living in the Forsyth property on Albany avenue prior to making her home on Maiden Lane. Of an old Quaker family which had lent great aid during the Revolutionary war, Mrs. Slauson continued aiding others throughout her life and many people have been the recipient of her assistance. Many charities were aided by her. Her home was among her friends rather than with the public and few knew of her extensive interest in charitable institutions. Mrs. Slauson held but one public office during her residence in Kingston, that of director of the Home for the Aged in Ulster County, being one of the original directors and holding that office at the time of her death.

Mrs. Slauson attended the old First Reformed Church although she was a member of the Universalist Church of New York city of which Dr. Hall is pastor. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Dutch Church. From its inception she was interested in the affairs of the Home for the Aged and was a substantial contributor to the institution.

A niece, Mrs. Cornelia C. Stafford of this city, and one nephew, William C. Haviland of White Plains, survive.

Argentine Moth Saves Continent

Australia Is Successful in Fighting Spread of Prickly Pear.

WASHINGTON.—A tiny Argentine moth has saved a continent from being turned into desert by a plant which was devouring more than 1,000,000 acres a year, literally driving farmers out of their houses and resisting attacks with liquid fire. The plant is the prickly pear, a cactus common over the United States, Mexico and South America. It has existed for many millions of years and all over its native habitat is kept under control by various insects and the competition of other plants.

Nearly a half-century ago a few plants were introduced into Australia from North America, intended for flower gardens. The continent had no cacti of its own and consequently had none of the natural enemies of these plants which have been developed by nature over millions of years to keep them in control in their native lands.

The prickly pears found themselves in an earthly paradise where they could run wild with nothing to stop them. By 1925 they had covered more than 60,000,000 acres in Queensland and New South Wales.

Seemed Unsolvable. The prickly pear is a virile plant, with a tenacious hold on life. Detached joints or pieces of joints in contact with the ground soon take root and grow. The cactus bears seeds which remain alive for 15 years or more. These are scattered widely by birds. Before a farmer realizes what has happened a few plants have become established on his land. From that point on the spread is very rapid and the cost of getting rid of it more than the land is worth.

But just when the problem seemed unsolvable, came salvation in the form of the little Argentine moth. Australian entomologists had hunted all over the Americas for insects which might get rid of the cactus. There were many of these, particularly in the moth family Phycitidae.

The majority of them, it was found, did no real good. Their larvae ate the cactus, but the plant was too tough to be killed by them.

Salvation From South America. The Argentine moth, however, displayed life habits which admirably fitted it to rescue a continent. Its eggs were laid in strings of 20 or 30 from a cactus leaf. All the larvae hatched at once and proceeded to tunnel into the watery leaves like a single insect. There might be thousands of these larvae engaged in a joint attack on a single plant. Usually two or three attacks are necessary to kill one of the harder plants. After a certain point its limit of resistance is reached and it seems to collapse suddenly.

There's a Science In Switching Tires NEW YORK.—Recent research by the Rubber Manufacturers' association has led that organization to issue advice to the public on the best plan for alternating tires on passenger cars. Tires should be switched without dismounting them from wheels.

Here is the advice: Switch the wheel positions of tires every 5,000 miles or thereabouts, changing wheels without dismounting tires, in this order: Right front to right rear; left rear to left front; left front to right front; right front to left rear; left rear to right rear; right rear to left rear. Camber, caster, toe-in and turning of the wheels, which are necessary for steering and turning the car, affect front tire wear. On the other hand power transmission is a decided factor in rear tire wear but does not affect front tires.

High crown roads are a factor in fast and irregular tread wear, causing tires to wear more on the inside of the tread toward the car, than on the outside.

Barking Dogs Doomed

As Peril in Air Raids

CHUNGKING, CHINA.—All dogs in Chungking, regardless of ownership, must submit to a "bark audition" test to determine whether they are likely to observe air raid regulations during Japanese night attacks on the capital.

Dogs with a barking complex will be killed immediately because the regulations state there shall be no sound whatever in the city when the Japanese planes are overhead.

Suggest Huge Tunnels For Air Raid Shelter

LONDON.—A proposal to build 1,200 miles of steel lined roadways underneath London, which would provide adequate shelter for the entire population of London in the event of air raids, has been put forward by R. Stokes, M. P., engineer for Ipswich. More than 5,000 people, it is estimated, could be accommodated in every mile of the roadways, which would be 15 feet in diameter and 60 feet below the surface of the ground. The cost of construction would be $500,000 a mile.

The efforts of the American government, in cooperation with private industry, to stimulate the construction of homes in the country will receive the hearty sanction of King George of England, according to the word received in Washington.

It does no good to prime a pump nowadays. Nobody wants to work a pump handle.

Manfro Is Held For Grand Jury On Wife's Charge

James Manfro, 36, of 22 Broadway, was held to await grand jury action when arraigned in police court today on a charge of second degree assault lodged against him by his wife.

When she appeared in court today she still carried her arm in a sling.

Judge Matthew V. Cahill in holding Manfro for the grand jury informed him that bail would be fixed by the county judge.

Dull, Featureless Market on Monday

Transactions on the Stock Exchange yesterday totaled but 350,000 shares, lowest for a full day in three weeks and it was a dull, featureless market. Opening was a shade firmer over Saturday's close, prices shaded downward during the day, then picked up a bit to close with a slight net loss for the day. Industrials in the Dow-Jones averages showed a loss of 0.06 point for the day, to 137.06; rails were down 0.04 point, to 27.90 and utilities declined 0.06 point, to 23.46.

On the London market trading was restricted, with the undertone steady; industrials remained firm, rails were off slightly. Paris Bourse closed irregular, with trading inactive. Amsterdam Bourse was affected by weakness of the guilder and in trading after the official close prices were lower.

Commodities were irregular, cotton and silk showing firmness, while there was a reaction in grains and cocoa made new lows for the season. Cotton was up eight to 14 points at the close of the market, July at the high point selling at 9.18 cents a pound. Silk showed gains from seven to 14½ cents a pound. Wheat closed 1¼ to 1½ cents a bushel lower in Chicago and corn was lower.

Federal Surplus Commodities Corp. accepted bids to supply 629,000 barrels of white flour at $2,296,000, excluding transportation costs. The flour will be turned over to state relief agencies for delivery between June 10 and August 28.

Memphis Natural Gas yesterday declared a dividend of 20 cents on common. Other declarations were: Duplan Silk Corp., semi-annual of 50 cents; Nehi Corp., 50 cents; Plough, Inc., 15 cents; Loose-Wiles Biscuit, 25 cents; Manufacturers Trust, 50 cents; Climax Molybdenum, 30 cents.

Eastern Steamship Lines pay 50 cents on preferred accumulations; paid the same amount on April 3. Current payment will leave dividend arrears of $1.50. Endicott Johnson Corp. took no action at directors meeting yesterday.

Travel on all traffic facilities in New York city in the year 1938 showed a decrease of 47,729,093, or 1.53 per cent over 1937. All forms of transportation with the exception of bus lines experienced the drop in travel.

Another rise of 1-8 cent a gallon was made at the end of the week in the mid-continent market. Zenith Radio Corp. reports net profit of $1,075,254 for the fiscal year ended April 30; equal $2.18 a share on capital stock vs. $1.42 a share in preceding year.

An increase of at least one cent a quart in retail milk prices in the New York area is seen due shortly as a result of the U. S. Supreme Court decision upholding the constitutionality of governmental regulation of the milk business.

Large retail stores reporting sales for May show gain over last year of from 10.7 to 20.8 per cent.

Information Asked About Burton's Mother

Information is wanted regarding the mother of one Ralph Burton who died at Liberty Monday. A message received yesterday from the Liberty police department stated that the man in question had died at that place and had said that his mother either ran a roadstand or worked at one just outside of Kingston.

There was no other information regarding the man or the cause of his death.

Sheriff Molyneux and deputies made a search of roadstands in this section after receiving the message later yesterday afternoon, but without success and the sheriff is asking The Freeman to aid in locating the mother of the dead man.

Calls Are Projects Device for Reds

Washington, June 6 (AP)—A former New York stage director told a congressional committee today that the WPA arts projects were a clever device "to sow the seeds of Communism."

Charles St. Bernard Dinsmore Walton, who said he was a stage manager on the federal theatre project, made the statement to the House committee investigating the WPA. He said the Workers Alliance, a union of WPA employees and the jobless, had dominated the theatre project until recently.

Representative Cannon (D-Mo.) characterized the testimony as "too absurd for words," contending that similar allegations had been denied repeatedly by prominent officials, including Mayor LaGuardia of New York. "Here's a man with a grouch," Cannon said, referring to Walton's statement that, after he had testified before the House committee investigating un-Americanism, he had been "immediately demoted" from director to stage manager.

Cannon clashed with Representative Woodrum (D-Va.), acting chairman of the WPA investigating committee, over the line of his questioning.

"Don't lecture the witness," Woodrum admonished. "Ask him questions and let him answer them."

"This is not a kangaroo court," Cannon snapped. "I need no help from the gentleman in conducting this questioning."

Walton told the committee, in response to questions, that most theatrical people in New York believed that every one in charge of the theatre project in New York "from Mrs. Hallie Flanagan down" should be removed from the government payroll.

Order on Alimony Signed by Judge

Justice Harry E. Schirick has signed an order adjudging the defendant in contempt of court in an action brought by Edith D. Soura against George P. Soura, an action for divorce. Morris Rosenblum appears for plaintiff and Maurice D. Baker for defendant.

A decree of divorce was granted January 19, 1934, and the order of contempt is based on the fact that the defendant has failed to make alimony payments of $7 a week as directed. It is charged the defendant is $1,850 in arrears.

The court directs that the defendant may purge himself of the contempt charge by making payments of $8 per week in addition to the $7 a week payment directed in the decree and by payment of $10 costs. The payments are to be made until the arrears are paid.

Appeal Is Decided In Turturro Case

The appellate division has recently decided an appeal in the matter of Beatrice Turturro, respondent, vs. Michael Turturro, appellant-defendant. Michael Turturro appeared for Mrs. Turturro and A. W. Lent appeared for the appellant and argued the appeal.

The order appealed from is unanimously affirmed with $10 costs and disbursements, upon condition that the alimony shall cease at the first trial or special term at which defendant is not in arrears in payment of alimony or counsel fees and moves for a trial of the action.

The motion before Justice Schirick was argued at the December special term and was for temporary alimony and counsel fees. The alimony previously fixed was $12 a week and $125 counsel fees and this was reduced by Justice Schirick to $7 a week and $100 counsel fees.

Luncheon Is Enjoyed by 75 Guests of Historical Society; Miss Pidgeon Presents Paper

The annual luncheon which followed the literary meeting of the Ulster County Historical Society at the Governor Clinton Hotel Monday forenoon was as usual a pleasing affair, about 75 guests enjoying the renewal of old acquaintances, a tasty luncheon and a few not too long after dinner talks.

Judge Hasbrouck presided at the luncheon and presented the two speakers at the morning session, the Rev. Dr. William H. S. Demarest and Miss Marie Kiersted Pidgeon, Mrs. Bruno L. Zimm of Woodstock and the Rev. G. J. Wulfschlegel of the Rev. Paliz Reformed Church, all of whom responded briefly. At the conclusion the Rev. Dr. F. B. Seeley pronounced the benediction.

Dr. Demarest spoke of the pleasure he felt at greeting his old friends here, mentioning Judge Hasbrouck, Judge Fowler and others with whom he became acquainted on occasions of visits here or at New Brunswick. He congratulated the Ulster county society on what it was accomplishing and brought greetings from the New Brunswick society, which has been in existence since 1870. The latter organization, he said, held six or eight meetings a year and papers given before it constitute a mass of valuable historical material.

Pleased at Acquisition
Dr. Demarest was pleased to note the historical markers which had been placed along the highways and considered them an asset of great value. He was interested in the acquisition of the Louis Bevier property in Marbletown by the society and in this connection referred to the late Dr. Louis Bevier of New Brunswick as a great teacher, one of the most talented and scholarly men.

Miss Pidgeon in brief remarks suggested that one use that might be made of the Bevier homestead was to use it as a location for the holding of family reunions.

Mrs. Zimm, one of the society's most active and valuable members, suggested that old records were often found in unexpected places according to some of her experiences. She told of a visit to Mrs. Josephine Tillson at Stone Ridge and the corroboration of a certain striking story in Sullivan county history which she received from her on the occasion of a visit some time since. Another instance was the finding of some valuable family records in a Bible which was on display at the book exhibition given in Woodstock last summer.

The Rev. G. L. Wulfschlegel noted that in the days that he was a student at New Brunswick he had studied Greek under Dr. Louis Bevier and had found him an inspiration and a man who imparted instruction of value outside of that contained in the text book.

Particularly missed Monday were a number of members of the society whose faces are generally seen at these annual luncheons. Among them was Mrs. Frank Seaman of Yama Farms, who on different occasions has presided; also Miss Mary Jansen DuBois, who has delivered two excellent papers before the society and her sister, Miss Marie Antoinette DuBois. Another was Edward L. Merritt, a valued contributor to the historical archives and for several years the society's secretary. Friends hope that when another year rolls around they and others who were missed Monday will be found on hand once more to take part in the exchange of greetings.

Miss Pidgeon's Paper

The Kiersteds—An informal history by one of them, Marie Kiersted Pidgeon, of Saugerties and New York city.

All families over a period of time tend to become equal. Certainly this is true when the period covers the three centuries since Surgeon Hans Kiersted, the first of the family to come here, set foot on the banks of the Hudson. For, if "it takes three generations to make a gentleman," it is apparent that, in the nine generations of Kiersteds since 1658, a gentleman could have been made, unmade, and made again. But, happily for the inspiring quality of history, in families we do not often hear of the unmakings. Our immediate forebears are wise enough to pass on such information only as will inspire us to make our contribution to the family achievement—the skip sheep-stealing, if any.

In nine generations there are many descendants. I am sure you do not wish to hear today about each of the two hundred and forty-seven descendants, by actual count, of the first six American generations listed in Major Randolph's very careful review "The Kiersted Family," which was published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record for July and October, 1934.

Not the Whole Story

Nor is Major Randolph's article the whole story. It is about the facts not mentioned by him that I appeal to you for help. (You see I started my public-speaking career in the Maxwells Opera House in Saugerties when I was given a prize in return for my high school speech. So, if you do not give me, in return for these present remarks, some additional information, the pleasant exchange tradition will be broken.) The information I request is about ladies who started life as Eyke Roosa, Ariantje Tappen and Ann Vezen. About them I should like to know especially as they married the first three Kiersteds in Ulster county, that is the first three of my vertical cross-section of the family. I select them because I think their fate is typical of that of many ladies married when they were—about 1670, in 1701 and 1732, respectively.

For the generation of Sara Roeloffse, the first Mrs. Hans Kiersted of Nieuw Amsterdam, and that of her famous mother, Anneke Jans, wife first of Roeloff Jansen of the Kil named for him in Dutchess county, records are abundant. The Daughters of the American Revolution have taken good care of the Leah DuBoises, the Nelly Wynkoops and the Maria Lockwoods (the brides in 1747, 1811 and 1850, of Doctor Christopher, of his son, John, Sr., and of Christopher's grandson, John, Jr.) that represent the Kiersted generation immediately preceding that of my mother, Mary A. Kiersted (Mrs. Frank Pidgeon).

It is the pioneers of our county, the younger set that came up from the city to reclaim the wilderness, that I should like to see members of our society study especially. Who will tell me what has been done and make further searches with me?

Were I to report to you merely on the "Hans" of John Kiersteds of the first quarter thousand of New York Kiersteds, there still be 24 or so persons to mention. Since I am speaking but briefly, the namesakes of the first Doctor Hans also present too broad a topic for discussion now. So I confine my remarks to my own vertical cross-section of the Kiersteds that of Hans Roeloff-Hans Roeloff-John of 1786—John of 1813—and of Mary, my mother. It is a matter of great regret to me that the latter's 85 summers prevent her from coming from her winter home in Surgeon Han's city of New York for this reunion.

Personal Research

Twentieth-Century Kiersteds will forgive me, I am sure, and correctly attribute the emphasis on my own family cross-section to time limits and a desire to present first-hand information, and not to egotism, if I only mention, in passing, a few of the present-day Kiersteds not in my direct line. The Luke-James Kiersted branch has supplied the only member of the name now a member of the Holland Society, namely Henry Stevens Kiersted of San Francisco. Doctor Kiersted, now retired, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, who is recorded as practicing in California in 1919, is a contemporary of another Surgeon Kiersted, Robert Livingston Loughran, well known to you all. Some of you will remember the interesting article on the Kiersteds that Doctor Loughran published about thirty years ago in Olde Ulster. I hope some day with him all New York and neighboring Kiersteds will be able to enjoy a family reunion at the Kiersted Homestead in Saugerties, owned by my mother until our well loved cousin, Saidee Kiersted (Mrs. Peter Jay Ehrhott) gallantly took the homestead over to keep it in the family.

Perhaps some day this society will have a family-reunions committee to help hospitable persons such as Mrs. Ehrhott with the somewhat overwhelming details of assembling families for reunions. Or, now that, through the generosity of the Bevier family, our society has a headquarters, perhaps we can have family reunions days there—a Kiersted Day, a Wynkoop Day, and so on.

Members of the Wynkoop family will be interested to note that, in the heart of Hans Kiersted's Island of Manhattan, today, Wynkoop Kiersted, the son of a distinguished engineer, perhaps, is to be found in the Chrysler Building, carrying on the family engineering tradition. He is the third of the name and his son, Wynkoop Kiersted, the Fourth, is a Naval Academy student at Annapolis.

The engineering activities of Nelly Hasbrouck, Livingston's brother, Oscar, of Anne Buddington Searle's husband, Lewen, of Margaret Searle's husband, George Robinson, one of the outstanding younger engineer officers of the United States Navy, of Elizabeth Schoonmaker's husband, Lawrence Van Etten, and of her brothers, James and Harry Loughran, engineers all, continue the Kiersted men's engineering activities that followed the five generations of medical work. Even so recently as last September in an Industrial and Engineering Chemistry article on Dr. Hans Kiersted and his famous Kierstedointment, we find a Kiersted engineering chemist mentioned. This is Roger C. Wells, today, chief chemist of the United States Geological Survey at Washington and a descendant of the two earliest physicians of Nieuw Amsterdam, Jean de la Montagne and Hans Kiersted.

It is interesting to note, as we mention these engineering members of the Kiersted family, the dearth of Kiersted members for Holland Society whose members must perpetuate the venerable surnames, humorously enough, of persons who, themselves, seldom used those surnames. I refer to the Dutch patronymic custom which has produced for us the names that we now use as surnames such as Mynderse, Jansen, Evertson, and others.

Now I am a descendant of a Twentieth-Century Kiersted not eligible for Holland Society membership. And documentary histories of New York, iconographies, narratives of the Netherlands, Dutch Reformed Church records, tenary pageant wedding scene, histories by Lamb, Van Rensselaer and others have devoted pages to the usefulness of the first Doctor Hans. He was, you remember, so useful in Nieuw Amsterdam that he could not be spared for Captain Martin Criegier's expedition to rescue from the Indians another ancestor of mine, Catrine DuBois, "without," as Governor Stuyvesant said "detriment to the whole place and all its inhabitants." Pages have been given not only to the usefulness of Kiersted convivial wedding customs in the raising of the first Dutch Reformed Church building in New York city but also to Cornelis Kiersted, silversmith of New Haven, Connecticut, whose father, Surgeon Han's eldest son, kept his father's town practice while a younger son, my first Ulster County Roeloff, came as a pioneer physician to our county. Since there is all this material about the earliest New York Kiersteds, I shall offer you only a few vignettes of the last five generations of Kiersteds and hope you will not forget my request for material on the three intervening generations of the one hundred years just before the American Revolution.

Moves to Saugerties

Let us take a day about this time of year—May 14—when, it is recorded in the Christopher Kiersted family Bible which my mother has in New York city, that Doctor Christopher moved from Kingston to Saugerties—as all good householders still move in the Netherlands on this very day. Or let us pretend that we are in Saugerties at the turn of the Twentieth Century when, on the day recorded on the date stone of the Kiersted Homestead on Main street.

A beautiful lady of 40 or so leads two little, round-eyed girls across the street from the comfortable house (now occupied by Judge George F. Kaufman) then on the corner where the Saugerties High School now stands. They go from a conservatory loved for its Marshal Niel roses to the superb flowering locust trees of the story-and-a-half limestone Kiersted Homestead, fully described in H. Reynold's Dutch house book. The locust trees probably have been planted, one on either side of the doorway, for the host and hostess of the house, as Miss Mary I. Johnson, antiquarian of Saugerties, tells us is generally the case. There are no motors to endanger street crossings and Frank Pidgeon's trotter, dashing out from behind the rose garden, is well in hand. The little girls—your speaker and Isabel Overbagh, who now presides over the Ulster Garden Club—are wide-eyed because Mary Kiersted Pidgeon tells them of the stockade formerly about the Kiersted Homestead and about how one of the family's devoted slaves, who used to trudge up and down the narrow, little staircase in the east, kitchen end of the house, once saved Leah DuBois Kiersted's life.

Indians coming down from the mountains were raiding the valley farms. "I'll look out of the dormer window," said Mistress Kiersted of Revolutionary days, "to be sure that all the Indians are gone." "Try a hat on a stick first, missy," suggested the wise servant. Leah Kiersted raised the stick—and an arrow went straight through a hat.

To this same gardener-historian, Mary Kiersted Pidgeon, when she was a girl, either a student of nine at the Moravian Seminary at Bethlehem, Pa., or in her first years at Vassar with May Sheffield, would come letters from a playmate, "Hans." "The same," she had made May Sheffield's future husband, Charles Cantine, welcome when Charles had unexpectedly dropped in at dinner time to show his bright little sister, Lydia, to his neighbor, John Kiersted—while the children's parents wondered where they were! But this playmate, "Hans," was not Mary's and Lydia's age. He was the president, at the same time, of two Saugerties banks (after having received due schooling in figures from Joseph Henry at the Albany Academy). Dutch, too, John Kiersted, Jr., understood and so could put at ease the drivers of yoked oxen who came in from the country to make their deposits in the bank even so lately as the late quarter of the Nineteenth Century. Sylvester says, speaking of John Kiersted, Jr.'s long presidency of the First National Bank of Saugerties, "At the head of an institution of this kind, Mr. Kiersted has been a public man in the broad sense of the term."

Church Activities

Of John Kiersted, Jr.'s activities as superintendent of the Dutch Reformed Church Sunday School in Saugerties, the speaker was to learn from loved paragon playmates and their mother, Susan Romeyn Hunter. In John Kiersted, Jr.'s day, there were still colored Kiersteds about, and Superintendent Kiersted was almost given, by mistake, the Christmas-tree toy of a little colored John Kiersted.

Doctor Dawes and others here still remember star-gazing through the telescope John Kiersted, Jr. installed at the Overlook Mountain House, which he and his younger brother, James Kiersted, Nelly Livingston's grandfather, built above Woodstock, New York. With his brother, Wynkoop, when the hemlocks flourished, John Jr., also built a large tannery at Mongaup Valley, Sullivan county, where his sister-in-law, Eliza Lockwood, was a lady of many business enterprises. In Sylvester's History of Ulster County, John Kiersted, Jr.'s strong, kindly face can be seen opposite the portrait of his father, John Kiersted, Sr.

The same spirit of comradeship and merriment which led John Kiersted, Jr. to sign his little daughter's letters "Hans" made John Kiersted, Sr., legislator and surveyor, at a great tease. And granddaughter Mary's fawn-colored, china dog did not escape. The disliked name of "Towser" was found by her, one morning, lightly pencilled on the base of her pet statuette in the same delicate lettering that many Ulsterites now cherish on the wonderfully accurate maps which have settled many a boundary dispute and inheritance. Any Kiersted boy brought up in the tradition of his great-grandmother Ann (Rigau) Vezen's family would naturally put "Towser" in unexpected places. For on the flyleaf of her 1638 Geneva Bible, which my mother has in New York city, a little wag of the family has drawn a picture of a favorite sailing ship and, boldly scrawled in French, "This Bible belongs to Alan-Rigau." So John Kiersted, Sr., combined French vivacity and Dutch drollery in playing with his little granddaughter. He must have cherished her especially since he had no daughters of his own.

This same John Kiersted, Sr., Sylvester reports to have been a man of fine physique "with the energy and force of several men." Active not only as a surveyor and a member of the New York State Legislature but in the lead and tanning businesses, like his own son, John Kiersted, Jr., John Kiersted, Sr., was also a deacon and elder of the Dutch Church of Katsbaan and Saugerties. Like his Seventeenth-Century ancestors he also helped build a Dutch church. He sacrificed his orchard on Main street in Saugerties to give the land for the present Dutch Reformed Church building.

With John Kiersted, Sr.'s generation, the recollections of generations now living, end. In Brink's History of Saugerties, can be read the story of John, Sr.'s father, Doctor Christopher's doing his bit in the American Revolution. From Major Randolph's account, already mentioned, we find that the three generations preceding Doctor Christopher's migration from Kingston to Saugerties, were physicians of Kingston. As Mr. Van Rensselaer said in her history of New York, "Kiersted's descendants followed in his steps with a constancy rare in our changeable America; it is believed that always, since his time, New York has had a physician or apothecary of his blood and name."

So much for the constancy of the Kiersted gentlemen. What of the Ladies Kiersted? Without exception they appear equally enterprising and adventurous. Little did I think when I sailed for Brazil a few years ago that I was on my way to a land where a Kiersted had been baptized so long ago as 1634. And yet there is the entry in the Doopregister of Hollanders in Brazil: "Sara Roeloffs, daughter of Roeloff Jans, Recife (or as we usually, and less correctly, call it Pernambuco), Brazil, 1634 October 29." Eight years after this Sara, then a young lady of seventeen, was marrying Dr. Hans Kierstede in Nieuw Amsterdam. Since I appear to be the only Kiersted who has bothered to learn both Dutch and Portuguese, it was with the keenest interest that I found some one who "belonged" to me who had spoken the language of Brazil—even at a Berkeley Square distance of three hundred years!

This Sara Roeloffs Kierstede must have been an alert, cosmopolitan person. Her father came from the Island of Masterlandt (which my good friend, Arnold J. F. van Laer, state archivist, tells us it is off the coast of Sweden near Göteborg) and so suppose Sara Roeloffs spoke Swedish, or, at that time, perhaps, Dano-Norwegian. Certainly Sara spoke Dutch since her wedding entry in the Dutch Church register of marriages says that she came "from Amsterdam." Soon to her knowledge of Brazilian Portuguese, she added the Algonquian Indian tongue and interpreted so well in making treaties with the Indians that Governor Stuyvesant gave her family a grant of land for her expert service. She must also have known a fifth language—that of the immigrants who were then coming in increasing "hordes" to her Dutch shores—the English language. She was also a much traveled young lady, especially for sailing ship days, by the time when, at twenty-two, she settled down in Nieuw Amsterdam and her second son, Roeloff, later of Ulster county, was baptized in 1647.

You will be interested to know that, in what is now one of the most crowded parts of Manhattan Island, her memory is literally kept ever "green" by the planting of the Sara Kierstede Children's Garden, named for her. This garden is on ground cleared of a building that was a fire hazard for the families living in it. If some of our members would like to help by sending plants, cuttings, or seeds, the plants are to be addressed to the Sara Kierstede Children's Garden, in care of the Friends and Neighbors Club, 315 East 108th street, New York city.

With such a mother, as well as an enterprising father, it is not surprising that the first Doctor Roeloff Kiersted, came as a pioneer to Ulster county at the age of 26 or so. I wish that I knew something of the girl he married, of her daughter-in-law, and of her daughter-in-law's daughter-in-law. For, as surely as the "in-laws" of this generation become the beloved parents of the next, so a good indication of a family's substantial character is the helpmates that its members acquire. (As a spinster I can afford to be careless about this matter—unless, perhaps, I be charged with a grave sin of omission!)

And so I ask you to paint a portrait of Roeloff Kiersted's wife, Eyke Roosa, of Ariantje Tappen, who married Roeloff's son, Hans, and of their daughter-in-law Ann Vezen, and granddaughter of the Huguenot, Jean Rigau. We need fuller portraits of their pre-Revolutionary Kiersted men, too. Often have I wished to know more of the first fifty years of the Kiersted homestead in Saugerties. Such studies of the persons mentioned should help to uncover material about the old stone house, too.

Let us collect, at the society's headquarters such data as would be needed by a writer of Ulster county ballads, similar to the verses about the Nieuw Amsterdam Kiersteds by Arthur Guiterman in his Ballads of Old New York, or by M. S. Eliot, about Dr. Hans Kierstede's chair, Cornelis's tankard, or Anneke Jans's will. From well authenticated data at hand it appears that the Kiersteds have been serious and scientific, whether in the biological or technological sciences. Always they have striven to be of service to Ulster county. But they have also been merry. From our luminous shadows of our Ulster county "Frans Banning Cocq" canvases, let us throw as much light as possible on the little girl with the doll in the best R. v. R. manner. Let us collect documents of jolly family and child life, such as those used in the Rietveld Clarke Village Life in Canandaigua, New York, as carefully as we gather data on Ulster county medicine, engineering and banking. Who knows but that in our membership, given the proper facts, we may have some one to do a Dutch-Huguenot novel as fine historically as Elizabeth Page's Tree of Liberty. Above all, let us collect facsimiles, not transcriptions, whenever we can get copies of original documents.

Noyes Seeking Revival of Pact For Milk Industry

New York, June 6 (AP)—Revival of a federal-state milk marketing compact—presaging higher retail prices—will be sought at a conference here today between Holton V. Noyes, state agricultural commissioner, and federal officials.

By a 5 to 4 decision, the U. S. Supreme Court yesterday upheld the federal act on which the agreement for the New York metropolitan district was based.

Noyes, O. E. Rice, chief of the dairy industry division of the Federal Department of Agriculture, and E. M. Harmon, federal administrator of the pact which became inoperative February 1, were to attend the meeting.

Since suspension of the pact after an adverse decision in lower courts, milk prices to producers dropped. In one instance, from $1.85 a hundredweight in January to $1.05 in April. The grade B retail price in New York dropped 2 1/2 cents a quart for home delivery.

The supreme court decision approved the setting of minimum and equalization of prices paid to producers whose sales outlets might be poorer than those of competitors.

Commissioner Noyes said he anticipated early cessation of "the cut-throat price cutting in the industry," and that he regarded the equalization phase of the decision as "most important."

Noyes said the New York system could be reinstated by reviving the former milk order or substituting a new one. He did not say how long a time might be required.

While the commissioner predicted that the decision would avert threatened milk "strikes," Jefferson county dairy farmers union members continued at Watertown, N. Y., their plans to strike for prices of $1.50 a hundredweight for June, $1.75 for July, and $2 for August.

"The farmers are more interested in prices than in legal aspects of the fight," declared Archie Wright, union head.

Court Order Sets Appraisal Rates

Justice Harry E. Schirick has signed an order fixing the amount of compensation and the expense accounts of the three commissioners of appraisal in connection with their last report on awards made by Delaware Section No. 6, commission which was filed May 26, 1939. The commissioners are Arthur Butler Graham, Samuel E. Aronowitz and E. Frank Flanagan, who heard New York city water-works claims arising out of the construction of the Rondout project.

The court allows each of the commissioners the sum of $3,100 for services and Mr. Graham, $2,847.47 and E. Frank Flanagan $176.06.

Funeral services for Mrs. Emilie Carpenter Slauson, widow of Austin M. Slauson, were held from the family residence, 61 Maiden Lane, this afternoon at 3 o'clock and were in charge of the Rev. Arthur E. Oudemans, pastor of the First Dutch Reformed Church of this city, and Dr. Frank Oliver Hall, pastor of the Church of Divine Paternity, New York city. Burial was in Willwyck cemetery.

Born at Harrison, Westchester county, a daughter of Thomas and Jane Carpenter, Mrs. Slauson had resided in this city about 30 years, living in the Forsyth property on Albany avenue prior to making her home on Maiden Lane. Of late, Quaker family which had lent her aid during the Revolutionary War despite their opposition to war, Mrs. Slauson continued aiding others throughout her life and many people have been the recipient of her assistance. Many charities were aided by her. Her life was among her friends rather than with the public and few knew of her extensive interest in charitable institutions.

Mrs. Slauson held but one public office during her residence in Kingston, that of director of the Board for the Aged in Ulster County, being one of the original directors and holding that office at the time of her death.

Mrs. Slauson attended the old First Reformed Church although she was a member of the Universalist Church of New York city of which Dr. Hall is pastor. She was a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of the First Dutch Church. From its inception she was interested in the affairs of the Home for the Aged and was a substantial contributor to the institution.

A niece, Mrs. Cornelia C. Stafford of this city, and one nephew, William C. Haviland of White Plains, survive.

Argentine Moth Saves Continent

Australia Is Successful in Fighting Spread of Prickly Pear.

WASHINGTON—A tiny Argentine moth has saved a continent from being turned into desert by a plant which was devouring more than 1,000,000 acres a year. Literally driving farmers out of their houses and resisting attacks with liquid fire. The plant is the prickly pear, a cactus common over the United States, Mexico and South America. It has existed for many millions of years and all over its native habitat is kept under control by various insects and the competition of other plants.

Nearly a half-century ago a few plants were introduced into Australia from North America, intended for flower gardens. The continent had no cacti of its own and consequently had none of the natural enemies of these plants which have been developed by nature over millions of years to keep them in control in their native lands.

The prickly pears found themselves in an earthly paradise where they could run wild with nothing to stop them. By 1925 they had covered more than 60,000,000 acres in Queensland and New South Wales.

Seemed Unsolvable.
The prickly pear is a virile plant, with a tenacious hold on life. Detached joints or pieces of joints in contact with the ground soon take root and grow. The cactus bears seeds which remain alive for 15 years or more. These are scattered widely by birds. Before a farmer realizes what has happened a few plants have become established on his land. From that point on the spread is very rapid and the cost of getting rid of it more than the land is worth.

But just when the problem seemed unsolvable, came salvation in the form of the little Argentine moth. Australian entomologists had hunted all over the Americas for insects which might help get rid of the cactus. There were many of these, particularly in the moth family Phycitidae.

The majority of them, it was found, did no real good. Their larvae ate the cactus, but the plant was too tough to be killed by them.

Salvation From South America.
The Argentine moth, however, displayed life habits which admirably fitted it to rescue a continent. Its eggs were laid in strings of 20 or 30 from a cactus leaf. All the larvae hatched at once and proceeded to tunnel into the watery leaves like a single insect. There might be thousands of these larvae engaged in a joint attack on a single plant. Usually two or three attacks are necessary to kill one of the harder plants. After a certain point its limit of resistance is reached and it seems to collapse suddenly.

There's a Science In Switching Tires
NEW YORK.—Recent research by the Rubber Manufacturers' association has led that organization to issue advice to the public on the best plan for alternating tires on passenger cars. Tires should be switched without dismounting them from wheels.

Here is the advice: Switch the wheel positions of tires every 5,000 miles or thereabouts, changing wheels without dismounting tires, in this order: Right front to right rear; right rear to left front; left front to left rear; left rear to right front. Camber, caster, toe-in and turning of the wheels, which are necessary for steering and turning the car, affect front tire wear. On the other hand power transmission is a decided factor in rear tire wear but does not affect front tires.

High crown roads are a factor in fast and irregular tread wear, causing tires to wear more on the inside of the tread toward the car, than on the outside.

Barking Dogs Doomed As Peril in Air Raids

CHUNGKING, CHINA.—All dogs in Chungking, regardless of ownership, must submit to a "bark analysis" test to determine whether they are likely to observe air raid regulations during Japanese night attacks on the capital.

Dogs with a barking complex will be killed immediately because the regulations state there shall be no sound whatever in the city when the Japanese planes are overhead.

Suggest Huge Tunnels For Air Raid Shelter

LONDON.—A proposal to build 1,200 miles of steel lined roads ways underneath London, which would provide adequate shelter for the entire population of London in the event of air raids, has been put forward by R. R. Stokes, M. P., engineer for Ipswich.

More than 5,000 people, it is estimated, could be accommodated in every mile of the roadways, which would be 15 feet in diameter and 60 feet below the surface of the ground. The cost of construction would be $500,000 a mile.

The efforts of the American government, in cooperation with private industry, to stimulate the construction of homes in this country will receive the hearty sanction of King George of England, according to the word received in Washington.

Manfro Is Held For Grand Jury On Wife's Charge

James Manfro, 36, of 22 Broadway, was held to await grand jury action when arraigned in police court today on a charge of second degree assault lodged against him by his wife.

In the information sworn to by the wife she alleged that on May 26, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon at the family home her husband assaulted her with a broom handle, breaking her left arm. She was confined to the Kingston Hospital for several days.

When she appeared in court today she still carried her arm in a sling.

Judge Matthew V. Cahill in holding Manfro for the grand jury informed him that he would be fixed by the county judge.

Will Fight Farr

New York, June 6 (AP)—James J. Braddock, former world heavyweight champion, accepted terms today to meet Tommy Farr of Wales, in a 15-round fight at Earl's Court Stadium, London, July 5. Debate Begins
Washington, June 6 (AP)—The House, starting at least three days of debate on Social Security Act amendments, today heard Rep. Sabath (D., Ill.) declare today that "the President and the Democratic party" should have the "overlapping" thanks of the American people for the pension program.

He urged the members not to consume the allotted eight hours, but to have a general debate on the hundred-page bill because "we have a great deal of other work before us."

Financial and Commercial Dull, Featureless Market on Monday

New York, June 6 (AP)—After a hesitant start, leading stocks rallied fractions to more than two points in today's market.

Volume picked up moderately on the come-back, with transactions for the five hours at the rate of approximately 600,000 shares. While there was a slowdown near the final hour, prices held well.

Wall Street sentiment seemed to have a turn for the better mainly on the idea liquidation had dropped to almost zero. In addition, there were a few moderately cheering business signs and hopes for tax revision revived with predictions a bill to alter certain taxes would come before the House next week.

Prospect of a quick settlement of the Briggs-Mfg. strike at Detroit, which has been hitting motor makers, brightened the picture, notwithstanding continuance of labor controversies elsewhere.

European markets moved listlessly. Bonds exhibited selective strength. Commodities were mixed.

From the upward swing were P. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Safeway Stores, Douglas Aircraft, Phelps Dodge, Great Northern, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Gypsum and Goodyear.

Higher by a point or so in the curb were Aluminum of America, Todd Shipyards, Gulf Oil and Lockheed.

PEACE—ON WAR BASIS

There is food for thought in a recent statement of Virginia Gayda, leading Fascist editor. He was speaking to an interviewer about the need of the axis powers for more territory, beginning with their former colonies. This earth, he said, has enough for all the peoples who inhabit it. Two of them—England and France—are bulging with superfluous lands. Two others—Italy and Germany—have not enough space to live on. The only solution of the problem lies in division of territories. There need be no war to solve it, he said, but there can be no peace until it is solved.

Should he not have reversed the order? May not peace be necessary before the solution can be worked out? Real peace, that is, not the militaristic deadlock in which the world now marks time.

"Even if the supreme disaster of war should be avoided," said Secretary Hull the other day, "the gigantic waste of human energies and material resources involved in the widespread construction of armaments on the present scale must inevitably exact a fearful toll in the general economic and social deterioration throughout the world. The result can only be to put many nations on drastically reduced rations of civilized existence for a long time to come."

But how can the start be made? How can the nations disarm, get their military establishments back into productive work, get their commerce to moving, get their hatreds stopped? It is almost as huge and difficult a task as it would be if the many mobilized armies had actually been fighting a war these last two years.

MEN AND FISHES

Prayers nowadays go out not only for those who "go down to the sea in ships" but still more for those who go under the sea in ships. The submarine, adding a third dimension to navigation, has solved difficult problems and developed new arts and skills, but is still in the trial stage.

Unexpected accidents still happen. Unforeseen perils develop. The problem is so complex that it may be generations before man can navigate the sea below the surface as securely as he does on the surface. The submarine is older than the airplane, but grows more slowly in safety and efficiency.

Americans, still mourning the death of so many fine young men on the Squalus, sorrowed with Englishmen last week for a submarine crew lost under almost the same conditions. It will doubtless be wise to go on developing such craft, in spite of the peril involved, even if by some miracle the world should come into a golden age of peace. They have great possibilities aside from their naval value, for salvaging, exploring and scientific work of various kinds.

The more men consider a problem like this, the more they may appreciate fishes. The latter solved it so long ago, and so completely, that they have forgotten there is any such problem.

HOMESICK FOR THE PAST

You can learn a lot about folks at a big world's fair. An old timer from Coney Island set up his snapshot booth on the Midway of the World of Tomorrow. He prepared a new backdrop showing the trolley and periscope, with more or less futuristic suggestions of other World's Fair buildings.

He has plenty of customers, but he finds they mostly shun his fancy new scenery and ask to have their pictures taken in the old-fashioned horse and buggy he had been using for the last thirty years at Coney Island. He thinks now he'll get out his oldest prop, a stuffed ox and ox-cart. He believes it will be even more popular.

A philosopher could probably make something of this situation. People fed up with the world of today and a little dubious about the world of tomorrow—at least as forecast by the fair promoters—turn contentedly, even wistfully, to the world of yesterday for relaxation and pleasure.

LOCAL REFORM—WHOSE JOB?

The Federal Department of Justice seems to be entering upon a crusade to clean up corrupt city government. A conspicuous example has been the successful prosecution of Boss Tom Pendergast in Kansas City.

This sort of activity seems, to many, the duty of the city governments themselves, or of their state governments if the cities fail to protect themselves from crime and exploitation. The national government has plenty to do in handling strictly Federal problems. And it is far better, for the principle and practice of self-government, for the cities and states to do their own jobs and clean their own stables.

If such tasks are unloaded upon an already overburdened government at Washington, it can probably add them to its load. Whether done locally or nationally, it is imperative that government throughout the country be cleaned up and made honest and effective. But if Washington has to do it, then Washington can properly demand that states and cities quit criticizing the Federal authorities for "intruding in their affairs."

We wouldn't be surprised if this country is suffering right now from too much salvation. Too many people trying to save it, in too many different ways, according to their lights.

More evidence that the heart of America is sound—there's a popular demand for weather maps again.

This "drafting" of presidential candidates isn't so rough as it seems. They're all willing to make the sacrifice.

Our Decoration Day parades might be called "military", but they are not "militaristic."

This is a building year. Build something, even if it's only a castle in the air.

We Americans, anyway, seem destined to have vacations as usual this summer.

The Germans have more and more war equipment and less and less household goods.

INJECTING HEMORRHOIDS OR PILES

While examining recruits for overseas service, cases of severe varicose veins in the legs were rejected. Some were so anxious to go overseas that they underwent operation and were later accepted. Cases of varicose veins in lower end of large intestine—hemorrhoids or piles—were likewise rejected unless they underwent operation.

Today in the great majority of cases operation is unnecessary as the injection of these varicose veins in the leg or bowel usually brings about a cure in a few weeks. The injection method, while known at the time, had been discredited to a considerable extent because of the failure of the sclerosing or hardening materials to work properly.

Hemorrhoids or piles are particularly distressing due to their pain, bleeding, and itching, yet many suffer for years with them rather than undergo the expense, danger, and loss of time, made necessary by operation. However, operation is not necessary now in a large number of cases due to the skill of the surgeon and the effectiveness of the sclerosing or hardening solution which "dries up" the hemorrhoid.

Dr. Lynn Krouse, St. Louis, in the Journal of the Missouri State Medical Association says:

"There are three methods of procedure used in treating hemorrhoids; first, surgery, which is invaluable in certain types of cases; second, injection which has merited use in a large group of cases; and third, palliation—giving relief with ointments and suppositories."

From a group of 100 cases, 75 were selected for the injection treatment, ranging in age from 16 to 86 years. The interval between treatments was from five to ten days. Pain, bleeding and the protrusion (piles coming outside) improved following the first and second injections. All cases showed the general effect upon the individuals such as nervousness, lack of endurance, and emotional disturbance. The hemorrhoids returned in less than 10 per cent of the cases which is not as large a percentage as by operation.

It is not the hard laborers but usually the office group with irregular diet habits that are mostly afflicted with hemorrhoids.

Remember, some cases can only be cured by surgery, but there is a large number of sufferers who can obtain relief by this injection method, who could thus rid themselves with little expense of this ailment which, aside from its pain and discomfort, greatly depresses the entire nervous system.

Senator C. T. Stagg Explains Negative Vote on Resolution

THE SENATE
STATE OF NEW YORK
ALBANY
220 North Tioga Street
Ithaca, New York
May 31, 1939

Mr. Louis E. Netter,
The Kingston Daily Freeman,
Kingston, New York.
Dear Sir:

I acknowledge your letter of May 22nd relative to my negative vote on the resolution concerning the so-called Albany Investigation.

This resolution was introduced on March 6th by Senator Wicks and Assemblyman Conway. The resolution in its original form carried an appropriation of $75,000.00 payable from the contingent fund of the legislature. In the Senate this resolution was referred to the Finance Committee and was not reported by that Committee. In the Assembly, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. On May 10th the resolution was reported out by the Ways and Means Committee with the provisions for an appropriation eliminated, and the amended resolution was adopted by the Assembly. On May 11th the amended Assembly resolution was referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee, and reported out by that Committee on May 19th. In the meantime, on May 9th, Senator Wicks had introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $250,000.00 for the use of a joint legislative committee to investigate the affairs of the City and County of Albany, this bill being referred to the Senate Finance Committee and never reported by that Committee.

The vote on the Assembly resolution was taken at the close of a long session, my recollection being that the vote in the Senate was on May 19th, the day before adjournment, when many important measures were under consideration. I have been much concerned with State expenditures, believing that the only way to reduce taxes is to curtail spending. I did not believe, and I do not now believe, that an expenditure of $250,000.00 for an investigation was justified, and I was opposed to Senator Wicks' bill of May 9th making an appropriation of that amount. At the time the vote on the resolution was taken in the Senate it was impossible to amend the appropriation bill reducing the amount of the appropriation without an emergency message from the Governor, and the Governor had formally notified the Legislature that emergency messages would not be given. Therefore, if the resolution were adopted on May 19th, provision for an appropriation for the use of the committee would have to be included in the supplemental budget to be passed on May 20th. At the time the vote was taken on the resolution in the Senate, I had no information as to the amount which would be included in the supplemental budget for the use of the committee. I did not feel justified in voting for the resolution and then find an item in the supplemental budget making an appropriation for the use of the committee in an amount which I could not approve. The passage of the supplemental budget on the last day of the session was necessary. I refused to be placed in the position of having to vote for the supplemental budget which might contain an amount for the committee which I might deem excessive. Presumably the interested parties would have asked for the inclusion of an appropriation of $250,000.00, the amount specified in the Senator Wicks' bill.

If the sponsors of the resolution had demanded action before the last hour of the session so that members of the Senate could have had definite information as to the amount of the appropriation, the result might have been different. Yours truly,

C. T. STAGG.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer should have known the interested parties who sought the Albany county investigation were not concerned in an appropriation but were concerned in getting an investigation started, letting the legislature fix the amount to finance such investigation. This attitude was known or should have been known to any interested legislator. Assemblyman Conway was at no time consulted by Mr. Stagg as to the resolution or the amount required to conduct such investigation. Assemblyman Conway has stated he would have approved any amount which in the judgment of the legislature was sufficient to finance the investigation. As to inclusion of any amount in the supplementary budget that matter would have been subject to amendment. Senator Stagg would have an opportunity to pass on the supplementary budget and if he thought the appropriation made in it was too large it was his right to move to amend the supplementary budget by striking out all or reducing the amount.

Sovereignty of States to Regulate Business Within Its Border, Appears to Have Vanished

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, June 6.—Whatever vestige of sovereignty the states have retained, so far as the power to regulate business and commerce within their borders is concerned, appears now to have vanished and to have been superseded by the unlimited power of congress, judging by the latest decision of the Supreme Court of the United States and other decisions at the present term of the court.

Heretofore, the producers of goods could argue that they were not subject to federal control. But now the supreme court says that milk producers who pass their milk on to handlers within a state are subject to federal authority because the milk may possibly go outside the state. Earlier this year, the court held that a company engaged in making sports wear garments for women and employing just a few workers was subject to federal authority, even though the goods might not go outside the state, because a strike of the few employees might affect interstate commerce. Just how the nation could suffer any hardship if a few less sports garments were made is hard to understand, but that's the verdict from on high.

The gradual stretching of the power of congress to regulate the internal concerns of the businesses of every state in the union has been upheld by a court in which four out of the nine are appointees of President Roosevelt. In the latest case, that relating to pricing of milk by federal order, the four Roosevelt appointees voted together, and with the aid of Justice Stone, who is reported to be slated for appointment as chief justice, in the event of the retirement of Mr. Hughes, the congressional power to regulate all commerce, irrespective of state lines, appears to have been sustained.

It has been a gradual evolution—this stretching of the commerce clause of the constitution to cover purely intra-state transactions—but little by little, in case after case, the complete and absolute authority of the congress to regulate production, on the ground that it does or may affect interstate commerce, has been established as the supreme law of the land, subject only to review by the people at the polls. If the present trend of decisions is continued, the state governments will find themselves with only the function of exercising the police power—the maintenance of order—though already congress is stepping into that field with a federal bureau of detection.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 94—William F. Romer
Serving the first nine years of her existence in Southern waters, the "William F. Romer" came to the Rondout creek in 1890 and plowed the waters of the Hudson for another quarter of a century before the junk dealer claimed her. During her career on the Hudson she became a familiar sight to lovers of the river steamboats, and her passing brought to a close another chapter in the vast and interesting history of the steamboats of the Hudson river.

James Clark built the hull of this vessel in 1881 at Baltimore, Maryland. Her keel was 221 feet 7 inches long, breadth of beam 52 feet 9 inches, depth of hold 12 feet 3 inches. Her gross tonnage was listed at 880, net tonnage at 503, and was powered by a vertical beam engine with a cylinder diameter of 56 inches with an 11 foot stroke.

Launched under the name of "Mason L. Weems," the steamboat known to people of this area as the "William F. Romer," plied the waters of the Chesapeake Bay between Baltimore and Frederickburg and up the Rappahannock river, carrying freight and passengers.

The "Mason L. Weems" was considered one of the finest and fastest steamboats on Chesapeake Bay at the time she appeared. She had extensive accommodations for passengers and a large freight capacity.

In the winter of 1890 Romer & Tremper purchased from the Cornell Steamboat Company the passenger and freight line between Rondout and New York. The previous year, under the Cornell banner, the steamboats "City of Kingston" and "James W. Baldwin" had been in service on this line, and when Romer & Tremper acquired the line they purchased the "Mason L. Weems" to run in line with the "James W. Baldwin."

The new steamboat had her name changed to the "William F. Romer," and her first trip to the Rondout was made on June 1, 1891, when she ran on the flats near Esopus Lighthouse while steaming through a light mist. She ran so high and dry on the flats that the bottoms of her paddle wheels were five feet out of the water at low time. The vessel was taken off the grounded spot and floated by the use of floats and pontoons were used to float her off the flats.

The "William F. Romer" ran until the fall of 1918 when she was laid up at Newburgh. In 1920 the Central Hudson Steamboat Company sold the steamboat to a Newburgh junk dealer, and everything of value was removed from her hull. The hull was purchased by Patrick Doherty to be used for dock purposes at Eavesport, a small landing near Smith's Landing on the upper Hudson river—and the history of another of the Hudson river steamboats was closed.

Plan Bus Service For Ulster Co. Day At World's Fair

Secretary Albert Kurdt of the executive committee of the Ulster County Council which has been making arrangements for participation in Ulster County-Kingston Day at the World's Fair—June 26—announced this morning that the committee soon would place on sale tickets covering round trip by bus to New York and admission to the fair at a total low cost of $3 a person.

The committee has reserved six buses, three each from the Greyhound and Adirondack Lines, providing transportation for 198 persons. The tickets will be on sale within a few days and may be secured at the Farm Bureau office. Plans also provide for placing them on sale at other points in the county. It will be a case of "first come first served" with 198 tickets the limit so far as present arrangements are concerned.

Plans for railroad transportation are still under consideration. Mr. Kurdt states that where 25 tickets are sold from any one point, the West Shore will make a special rate of $2.75 for the trip. If a guarantee of 300 can be secured the road will make a low rate of $1.80.

The admission tickets will be in the nature of a souvenir of the day, the stub being used for admission at the gate and the balance of the ticket being returned to the holder. These tickets, which will be sold at the regular admission price, will be available to all who intend to visit the fair on Ulster County Day, whether they make the trip by bus, train or by private car. They will be on sale in the county in the near future.

Mr. Kurdt said this morning that he understood that the Jacobson Shirt factory employees had chartered a special bus for the day and that among others a group at Ulster Park is considering the proposition to run a bus from that place.

Rignall Named No. 8 Principal

young lady in question, I do believe that appointments of this nature may lead to abuses. When it is known and understood that board members may make appointments of their close kin to board positions, it is inevitable that we shall have individuals striving to become members of the board primarily for the purpose of giving their close relatives employment.

"Whenever a candidate possessing such relationship is brought before the board for consideration, I believe that it is almost impossible to regard him or her with the same objectivity and impartiality as though the board were dealing with an individual who had no close sponsor present.

"I believe, finally, that the practice to which I have referred will undermine the confidence of the community in the disinterestedness of board policies.

"I regret that it is necessary for me to take this position with regard to the daughter of a member of the board who has devoted many years of intelligent and unselfish service to his duties."

Mr. Katz at one time during the discussion asked whether it would relieve the situation if he submitted his resignation to the mayor. The board members referring to his past services on the board urged that he do not take this step.

Under the education law a close relative of a member of a board of education may be voted to a position in a school system by a two-thirds vote of the board. The vote in other cases is a majority vote.

On the vote taken on the appointment of Miss Katz the vote was 7 in favor of adoption of the committee's recommendation of Miss Katz and one in opposition.

Committee Report

The balance of the committee recommendations were unanimously approved. The report of the committee as made by Trustee Remmert was:

"Raymond Rignall, principal of School No. 1, to principalship of No. 8. Mr. Rignall has been teaching in the Kingston system for several years, as eighth grade teacher in school No. 6 and as principal of school No. 1. His salary will be $2,000.

"For the vacancy in school No. 4, caused by the resignation of Anna Decker, Henrietta Katz, a graduate of Kingston High School and of New Paltz Normal, with experience as a substitute in Kingston schools; salary $1,100.

"Miss Carolyn Arnold of school No. 2 has offered her resignation so she may take her retirement. For this position the committee has designated Anna Whitbeck, a graduate of Kingston High School and New Paltz Normal, with three years of successful experience in a rural school and has substituted in the Kingston schools for a period of time. Salary $1,175.

"Miss Marie Sheppard of school No. 5, has submitted her resignation to take effect at the close of this school year. The committee submits the appointment of Julietta M. Nettleton, a resident of Kingston, a graduate of New Paltz Normal School and several years of successful experience. Salary $1,175.

"As principal for school No. 1, Stephen Hyatt, a graduate of Kingston High School, New Paltz Normal, Albany State College with degree of B. S. in Education. He has had four years of successful experience as principal of the school in Pine Hill. He is highly recommended by his district superintendent. His salary will be $1,600."

It was stated by Superintendent Van Ingen that the application of Miss Katz for a permanent position in the teaching staff of Kingston school system had been on file since 1935.

The board then adjourned and took up the matter of making up the annual school budget. It is expected that this budget will be ready for submission to the board at the next regular meeting.

Refugees' Liner Sails for Germany

once the ship reached Hamburg, Dedrick said.

"They will be put ashore. They are not our problem."

Bernard H. Sandler, an attorney representing groups interested in the refugees, said Dedrick had assured him that if he would put up a $50,000 bond the ship could be brought back. He said $6,000 had been pledged.

"If nobody will take these refugees," Sandler said, "we will appeal to President Roosevelt to send an emergency message to Congress to suspend the immigration law until the status of these unfortunate cases can be determined. I believe Congress will give them temporary asylum here when it is made plain they are returning to certain death in Germany."

Sandler previously had sent a wireless to the St. Louis asking the master to head toward the American shore and anchor within the international line.

It is well to remember that if you drive faster than 60 it may cost you 50.

Steelworker Tries To Shoot Duchess

and the almost simultaneous breaking of a window pane at the home of the Princess Royal, Countess of Harewood, sister of King George VI, were the subjects of a Scotland Yard investigation to determine if they were linked with a terrorist campaign.

During long hours of questioning of the prisoner Scotland Yard detectives were understood to have been busy checking markings on the sawed-off shotgun picked up near the Kent home after the incident.

The operatives sought to find out where the gun was obtained and under what circumstances. Deepest mystery surrounded the shooting and the motive behind it. The only authorized statement of Scotland Yard said:

"As her Royal Highness was leaving her residence, 3 Belgrave Square, at 9 p. m. it was alleged that a shot was fired in the direction of her car. Later a man accompanied police to the Gerald Road Police Station."

The duchess went on to the theatre despite the shooting. With her was Lady Portlinton. They saw "Wuthering Heights." The duchess, the former Princess Marina of Greece, is 32 years old and known for her beauty and chic.

Car Is Untouched

Her automobile was untouched by the shotgun blast.

Lawlor's address was given on the police blotter as in a lower middle-class section of southeast London.

He was brought before Magistrate Clyde Wilson in Westminster police court shortly before noon. The detective Inspector Henry Hayward as prosecution witness.

The officer offered in evidence a shotgun, its barrel sawed off at about 12 inches.

Hayward testified Lawlor insisted he had a certificate of ownership for the weapon. The witness added that Lawlor acknowledged having had the weapon in Belgrave Square. Proceedings were delayed while the magistrate insisted on production of a witness who might testify he saw Lawlor fire the gun and a recess was ordered until after 2 p. m. (10 a. m. EST.)

She was not aware of exactly what occurred until he returned home. The Duke of Kent, young brother of the king, had left the house a short time before his wife to keep a speaking engagement and he also was advised upon his return to Belgrave Square.

Their two children, Prince Edward and Princess Alexandra, are staying in Buckinghamshire.

Earl Calls Officers

The Earl of Harewood, husband of the Princess Royal, himself called Scotland Yard about the window in their Green street home. There was a tiny hole in the pane, and glass around the hole was splintered. A missile had penetrated the window shade.

The police found no immediate connection between the two incidents. They had under consideration, however, the possibility that sympathizers with the outlawed Irish Republican Army, king-hating advocate of Irish independence, were responsible.

Three policemen in place of the customary one were assigned to the Kent home but only one was on guard this morning at the Harewood house.

Both the Duke and Duchess of Kent and the Harewoods have had previous experiences for which the I.R.A. was blamed.

The Duke, who leaves for Australia in October to be governor general, and his duchess postponed a visit to Ulster April 17 because of threats attributed to the Irish extremists.

The Harewood castle in Portunna, western Ireland, was burned shortly before he and the Princess Royal were to visit it in 1928. Subsequent investigation indicated arson.

It was extinguished by employees of the plant with the use of chemicals. Cornell Hose was called. Deputy Fire Chief Fred M. Leverich said the fire was caused by static electricity. This morning the fire department was called out for a fire in the Sterling street dump.

Winner, Runner-Up in Spelling Bee

Championship spellers for Ulster county grade schools are shown above with Superintendent Clarence Johnson of Saugerties, after the elimination contests Friday afternoon at the high school. Genevieve Young, right, from the Ruby school, was the winner, misspelling two words out of a total of 75. Raymond Smith, left, placed second, misspelling three words. The winner will go to the state fair at Syracuse to compete with other county winners. In case the winner can not attend the contest at the fair, the alternate second winner will represent Ulster county.

No Civil Cases Ready for Court

No civil case was ready for trial Monday afternoon at the opening of the June term of county court, and Judge Traver made up a day calendar for Wednesday and excused jurors until 10 o'clock on that day. The court recessed until 10 o'clock this morning without a jury.

Fifteen of the panel of jurors sought excuses and were excused by the court.

A negligence action, Thomas O'Rourke against Martin E. Munnelly and James E. Phelan was discontinued without costs. An action for goods sold and delivered, brought by Harry Maltz against George Rappaport, was settled.

The day calendar for Wednesday is Nos. 39, 42, 46, 52, 54, 57, 59 and 11. The calendar will again be called Wednesday morning. Whether the Schreiber vs. Callanan Road Improvement Co. negligence action, will go on next week will be later determined. This case was once tried and resulted in a disagreement.

Luncheon Is Enjoyed by 75 Guests of Historical Society; Miss Pidgeon Presents Paper

The annual luncheon which followed the literary meeting of the Ulster County Historical Society at the Governor Clinton Hotel Monday forenoon was as usual a pleasing affair, about 75 guests enjoying the renewal of old acquaintances, a tasty luncheon and a few not too long after dinner talks.

Judge Hasbrouck presided at the luncheon and presented the two speakers at the morning session, the Rev. Dr. William H. S. Demarest and Miss Marie Kiersted Pidgeon. Mrs. Bruno L. Zimm of Woodstock and the Rev. G. J. Wullschlaeger of the New Paltz Reformed Church, all of whom responded briefly. At the conclusion the Rev. Dr. F. B. Seelye pronounced the benediction.

Dr. Demarest spoke of the pleasure he felt at greeting his old friends here, mentioning Judge Hasbrouck, Judge Fowle and others with whom he became acquainted on occasions of visits here or at New Brunswick. He congratulated the Ulster county society on what it was accomplishing and brought greetings from the New Brunswick society, which has been in existence since 1870. The latter organization, he said, holds six or eight meetings a year and papers given before it constitute a mass of valuable historical material.

Pleased at Acquisition
Dr. Demarest was pleased to note the historical markers which had been placed along the highways and considered them an asset of great value. He was interested in the acquisition of the Louis Bevier property in Marbletown by the society and in this connection referred to the late Dr. Louis Bevier of New Brunswick as a great teacher, one of the most talented and scholarly men.

Miss Pidgeon in brief remarks suggested that one use that might be made of the Bevier homestead was to use it as a location for the holding of family reunions.
Mrs. Zimm, one of the society's most active and valuable members, suggested that old records were often found in unexpected places according to some of her experiences. She told of a visit to Mrs. Josephine Tillson at Stone Ridge and the corroboration of a certain striking story in Sullivan county history which she received from her on the occasion of a visit some time since. Another instance was the finding of some valuable family records in a Bible which was on display at the book exhibition given in Woodstock last summer.

The Rev. G. L. Wullschlaeger noted that in the days that he was a student at New Brunswick he had studied Greek under Dr. Louis Bevier and had found him an inspiration and a man who imparted instruction of value outside of that contained in the text book.

Particularly missed Monday were a number of members of the society whose faces are generally seen at these annual luncheons. Among them was Mrs. Frank Seaman of Yama Farms, who on different occasions has presided; also Miss Mary Jansen DuBois, who has delivered two excellent papers before the society and her sister, Miss Marie Antoinette DuBois. Another was Edward L. Merritt, a valued contributor to the historical archives and for several years the society's secretary. Friends hope that when another year rolls around they and others who were missed Monday will be found on hand once more to take part in the exchange of greetings.

Miss Pidgeon's Paper
The Kiersteds—An informal history by one of them, Marie Kiersted Pidgeon, of Saugerties and New York city.

All families over a period of time tend to become equal. Certainly this is true when the period covers the three centuries since Surgeon Hans Kiersted, the first of the family to come here, set foot on the banks of the Hudson. For, if it takes three generations to make a gentleman, it is apparent that, in the nine generations of Kiersteds since 1658, a gentleman could have been made, unmade, and made again. But, happily for families we do not often hear of the unmaking. Our immediate forebears are wise enough to pass on such information only as will inspire us to make our contribution to the family achievement—the skip sheep-stealing, if any.

In nine generations there are many descendants. I am sure you each of the two hundred and forty-seven descendants, by actual count of the first six American generations listed in Major Randolph's very careful review "The Kiersted Family," which was published in the New York Genealogical and Biographical Record for July and October, 1934.

Not the Whole Story
Nor is Major Randolph's article the whole story. It is about the facts not mentioned by him that I appeal to you for help. (You see I started my public-speaking career in the Maxwell Opera House in Saugerties when I was given a prize in return for my high school speech. So, if you do not give me, in return for these present remarks, some additional information, the pleasant exchange tradition will be broken.) The information I request is about ladies who started life as Eyke Roosa, Ariantje Tappen and Ann Vezien. About them I should like to know especially as they married the first three Kiersteds in Ulster county, that is the first three of my vertical cross-section of the family. I select them because I think their fate is typical of that of many ladies married when they were—about 1670, in 1701 and 1732, respectively.

For the generation of Sara Roeloffs, the first Mrs. Hans Kiersted of Nieuw Amsterdam, and that of her famous mother, Anneke Jans, wife first of Roeloffs, Jansen of the Kil named for Roeloffs in Dutchess county, records are abundant. The Daughters of the American Revolution have taken good care of the Leah DuBois, the Nelly Wynkoops and the Maria Lockwoods (the brides in 1747, 1811 and 1850, of Doctor Christopher of his son, John, Sr., and of Christopher's grandson, John, Jr.) that represent the Kiersted generation immediately preceding that of my mother, Mary A. Kiersted (Mrs. Frank Pidgeon).

It is the pioneers of our county, the younger set that came up from the city to reclaim the wilderness, that I should like to see members of our society study especially. Who will tell me what has been done and make further searches with me?

Were I to report to you merely on the "Hans" of John Kiersted of the first quarter thousand of New York Kiersteds, there would still be 24 or so persons to mention. Since I am speaking but briefly, the namesakes of the first Doctor Hans also present too broad a topic for discussion now. So I confine my remarks to my own vertical cross-section of the Kiersteds that of Hans-Roeloffs, Hans-Roeloff John of 1786—John of 1813—and of Mary, my mother. It is a matter of great regret to me that the latter's 85th birthday prevented her from coming from her winter home in Surgeon Hans's city of New York for this reunion.

Personal Research

Twentieth-Century Kiersteds will forgive me, I am sure, and correctly attribute the emphasis on my own family cross-section to time limits and in desire to present first-hand information, and not to egotism, if I only mention, in passing, a few of the present-day Kiersteds not in my direct line. The Luke-James Kiersted branch has supplied the only medical member of the nation, a member of the Holland Society, namely Henry Stevens Kiersted of San Francisco. Doctor Kiersted, now retired, a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, who is recorded as practicing in California in 1919, is a contemporary of another Surgeon Kiersted, Robert Livingston Loughran, well known to you all. Some of you will remember the interesting article on the Kiersteds that Doctor Loughran published about thirty years ago in Old Ulster. I hope some day with him all New York and neighboring Kiersteds will be able to enjoy a family reunion at the Kiersted Homestead in Saugerties, owned by my mother until our well loved cousin, Saldee Kiersted (Mrs. Peter Jay Ehrgott) gallantly took the homestead over to keep it in the family.

Perhaps some day this society will have a family-reunion committee to help hospitable persons such as Mrs. Ehrgott with the somewhat overwhelming details of assembling families for reunions. Or, now that, through the generosity of the Bevier family, our society has a headquarters, perhaps we can have family reunion here—a Kiersted Day, a Wynkoop Day, and so on.

Members of the Wynkoop family will be interested to note that, in the heart of Hans Kiersted's Island of Manhattan, today Wynkoop Kiersted, the son of a distinguished engineer of the same name, is to be found in the Chrysler Building, carrying on the family engineering tradition. He is the third of the name and his son, Wynkoop Kiersted, the Fourth, is a Naval Academy student at Annapolis.

The engineering activities of Nelly Hasbrouck, Livingston's brother, Oscar, of Anneke Eddington Seale's husband, Lewen, Margaret Seale's husband, George Robinson, one of the outstanding younger engineer officers of the United States Navy, of Elizabeth Schoonmaker's husband, Lawrence Van Etten, and of her brothers, James and Harry Loughran, engineers all, continue the Kiersted men's engineering activities that followed the five generations of medical work. Even so recently as last September in an Industrial and Engineering Chemistry article on Dr. Hans Kiersted and his famous Kierstedointment, we find a Kiersted engineering chemist mentioned. This is Roger C. Wells, today chief chemist of the United States Geological Survey at Washington and a descendant of the two earliest physicians of Nieuw Amsterdam, Jean de la Montagne and Hans Kiersted.

It is interesting to note, as we mention these engineer members of the Kiersted family, the dearth of Kiersted members for Holland Society whose members must perpetuate the venerable surnames, humorously enough, of persons who, themselves, seldom used those surnames. I refer to the Dutch patronymic custom which has produced for us the names that we now use as surnames such as Mynderse, Jansen, Everson, and others.

Now I am a descendant of a Twentieth-Century Kiersted not eligible for Holland Society membership. And documentary histories of New York, iconographies, narratives of New Netherlands, a Dutch Reformed Church tercentenary pageant wedding scene, histories by Lamb, Van Rensselaer and others have devoted pages to the usefulness of the first Doctor Hans. He was, you remember, so useful in Nieuw Amsterdam that he could not be spared for Captain Martin Criegier's expedition to rescue from the Indians another ancestor of mine, Catriene DuBois, "without," as Governor Stuyvesant said "detrimment to the whole place and all its inhabitants." Pages have been given not only to the usefulness of Kiersted in the raising of the first Dutch Reformed Church building in New York city, but also to Cornelius Kiersted, silversmith of New Haven, Connecticut, whose father, Surgeon Hans's eldest son, kept his father's town practice while a younger son, my first Ulster County Roeloffs, came as a pioneer physician to our county. Since there is all this material about the earliest New York Kiersteds, I shall offer you only a few vignettes of the last five generations of Kiersteds and hope you will not forget my request for material on the three intervening generations—the one hundred years just before the American Revolution.

Moves to Saugerties

Let us take a day about this time of year—May 14—when, it is recorded in Dutch in the Christopher Kiersted family Bible which my mother has in New York city, that Doctor Christopher moved from Kingston to Saugerties—all good householders still move in the Netherlands on this very day. Or let us pretend that we are in Saugerties at the turn of the Twentieth Century on June 6th, the day recorded on the date stone of the Kiersted Homestead on Main street.

A beautiful lady of 40 or so leads two little, round-eyed girls across the street from the comfortable house (now occupied by Judge George F. Kaufman) then on the corner where the Saugerties High School now stands. They go from a conservatory loved for its Marshall Niel roses to the superb flowering locust trees of the story-and-a-half limestone Kiersted Homestead, fully described in H. Reynolds's Dutch house book. The locust trees probably have been planted, one on either side of the doorway, for the host and hostess of the house, as Miss Mary I. Johnson, antiquarian of Saugerties, tells us is generally the case. There are no motors to endanger street crossings and Frank Pidgeon's trotter, dashing out from behind the rose garden, is well in hand. The little girls—your speaker and Isabel Overbagh, who now presides over the Ulster Garden Club—are wide-eyed because Mary Kiersted Pidgeon tells them of the stockade formerly about the Kiersted Homestead and about how one of the family's devoted slaves, who used to trudge up and down the narrow, little staircase in the east, kitchen end of the house, once saved Leah DuBois Kiersted's life.

Indians coming down from the mountains were raiding the valley farms. "I'll just look out of the dormer window," said Mistress Kiersted of Revolutionary days, "to be sure that all the Indians are gone." "Try a hat on a stick first, missy," suggested the wise servant, Leah Kiersted raised the chief of an arrow went straight through the hat.

To this same, garden-historian, Mary Kiersted Pidgeon, when she was a girl, either a student of nine at the Moravian Seminary at Bethlehem, Pa., or in her first years at Vassar with May Sheffield, would come letters from a playmate, "Hans." This same Hans had made May Sheffield's future husband, Charles Cantline, welcome when Charles had unexpectedly dropped in at dinner time to show his bright little sister, Lydia, to his neighbor, John Kiersted—while the children's parents wondered where they were! But this playmate "Hans" was not Mary's and Lydia's age. He was the president, at the same time, of two Saugerties banks (after having received due schooling in figure from Joseph Henry at the Albany Academy). Dutch, too, so could put at ease the drivers of yoked oxen who came in from the country to make their deposits in the bank even so lately as the late quarter of the Nineteenth Century. Sylvester says, speaking of John Kiersted, Jr.'s long presidency of the First National Bank of Saugerties. "At the head of an institution of this kind, Mr. Kiersted has been a public man in the broad sense of the term."

Church Activities
Of John Kiersted, Jr.'s activities as superintendent of the Dutch Reformed Church Sunday School in Saugerties, the speaker was to learn from loved paragon playmates and their mother, Susan Romeyn Hunter. In John Kiersted, Jr.'s day, there were still colored Kiersteds about, and Superintendent Kiersted was almost given, by mistake, the Christmas-tree of a little colored John Kiersted.

Doctor Dawes and others here still remember star-gazing through the telescope John Kiersted, Jr. installed at the Overlook Mountain House, which he and his younger brother, James Kiersted, built above Woodstock New York. With his brother, Wynkoop, when the hemlocks flourished, John, Jr. also built a large tannery at Mongaup Valley, Sullivan county, where his sister-in-law, Eliza Lockwood, was a lady of many business enterprises. In Sylvester's history of Ulster County, John Kiersted, Jr.'s strong, kindly face can be seen opposite the portrait of his father, John Kiersted, Sr. The same spirit of comradeship and merriment which led John Kiersted, Jr. to sign his little daughter's letters "Hans" made John Kiersted, Sr., legislator and surveyor, a great tease. And, granddaughter Mary's fawn-colored, china dog did not escape. The disliked name of "Towser" was found by her, one morning, lightly pencilled on the base of her pet statuette in the same delicate that, in what is now one of the most crowded parts of Manhattan Island, her memory is literally kept ever "green" by the planting of the Sara Kiersted Children's Garden, named for her. This garden is on ground cleared of a building that was a fire hazard for the families living in it. If some of our members would like to help by sending plants, cuttings, or seeds, the plants are to be addressed to the Sara Kiersted Children's Garden, in care of the Friends and Neighbors Club, 315 Chest 108th street, New York city.

With such a mother, it is not surprising that the first Doctor Roeloffs Kiersted came as a pioneer to Ulster county at the age of 26 or so. I wish that I knew something of the girl he married, of her daughter-in-law, and of her daughter-in-law's daughter-in-law. For, as surely as the "in-laws" of this generation become the beloved parents of the next, so a good indication of a family's substantial character is the helpmates that its members acquire. (As a spinster I can afford to be carefree about this matter—unless, perhaps, I be charged with a grave sin of omission!)

And so I ask you to paint a portrait of Roeloffs Kiersted's wife, Eyke Roosa, of Ariantje Tappen, who married Roeloffs's son, Hans, and of their daughter-in-law Ann Vezien, and granddaughter of the Huguenot Jean Rigeau. We need fuller portraits of their pre-Revolutionary Kiersted men, too. Often have I wished to know more of the first fifty years of the Kiersted homestead in Saugerties. Such studies of the persons mentioned should help to uncover material about the old stone house, too.

Let us collect, as the society's headquarters such data as would be needed by a writer of Ulster county ballads, similar to the verses about the Nieuw Amsterdam Kiersteds by Arthur Guiterman in his Ballads of Old New York, or by M. S. Eliot about Dr. Hans Kiersted's chair, Cornelis's tankard, or Anneke Jans's will. From well authenticated data at hand it appears that the Kiersteds have been serious and scientific, whether in the biological or technological sciences. Always they have striven to be of service to Ulster county. But they have also been merry. Units in County To Attend Rally Of Area Legion

Middletown, June 6.—American Legionnaires belonging to Ulster County Posts are planning to attend the Ninth District Mobilization which will be held in this city June 10 and 11. The call for the mobilization was issued by District Commander William Burke of Cornwall and will be sponsored by Middletown Post, No. 151.

The veterans will find plenty of entertainment during the two days of mobilization. On the first day, June 10, there will be reunions, concerts and the military ball at the armory in the evening. There will also be dancing and amusement in various places in the city.

One of the features of the first day will be a parade by the fun making part of the legion—the "40 and 8." One of their famous wrecks is scheduled for the evening.

On Sunday, June 11, registration of the attending posts will begin at an early hour at the state armory. At 11 o'clock there will be a military field Mass and special Legion services in all churches. At noon the drum corps competition will get under way at Wilson Field. Over 100 drum corps and bands are entered in the senior and junior classes. At 5 o'clock, 5,000 Legionnaires will be marching in the mobilization parade, one of the largest exhibitions Middletown has ever seen upon its streets.

Beside the Legionnaires from the Ninth District of New York, there will be, as parade guests, the Third District of New York, the Ninth from New Jersey, the 15th from Pennsylvania, the 29th Divisions Posts from New Jersey and a large number of Posts from New York and other cities. Visitors will find the 156th Field Artillery, New York National Guard, camped at the St. Alberts Campus. This regiment will lead the mobilization parade. The Guardsmen will demonstrate the working of the large field pieces for the large number of visitors.

Three Cases in Court

Three cases were brought to the attention of Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court today. William Zannos of Saugerties, arrested Monday afternoon on a charge of public intoxication on North Front street, had his case held open until later. Herbert Williamson, a negro, of 215 North street, charged with being a disorderly person in failing to support his wife and four children, had his hearing adjourned. Alex G. Cruikshank of Oneonta, charged with operating a car with defective brakes, was fined $5. Mr. Cruikshank's car struck the rear of another car at Pearl and Fair streets, Monday afternoon. He made good the damage to the other car.

Women sigh for the days when men were men. Men sigh for the days when women weren't.

By L. L. STEVENSON

Spooks: Recently word spread that an old brownstone house rapidly falling into ruin on the outskirts of the Bronx was haunted. The tale ran that the ghost was that of a woman who had been killed there by her husband many years ago. No one saw the ghost but several persons declared that in the darkness of the night they heard unearthly groans. Finally four young men, all deeply interested in psychic phenomena, decided to investigate. Meeting at midnight, they boldly entered the house. What was taken to be a moan or a groan sent three of them out hurriedly. The fourth remained. His companions waited for him breathlessly and just when they had made up their minds to notify the police, out he came. With him he brought not one "ghost" but two. They were a pair of small owls that had been evidently decided that a ruined and deserted house made a fine residence.

Zoological: Friends of Medrano and Donna, Hispanic dancers, observed them sneaking in and out of vegetarian restaurants lately. As they seldom eat anything but meat, so much curiosity was aroused that a checkup was made. It seems that on their last trip to Argentina, the dancers acquired a pet ocelot. It's a gorgeous, sleek animal, closely related to the leopard. When young, it makes a playful and entertaining pet. But when it grows older, it reverts to nature and becomes a fierce, meat-eating beast. So, to keep their pet tame and happy, Medrano and Donna have been endeavoring to feed it with a diet of vegetable and meat balls.

Stories: Several correspondents have called attention to the fact that the Hitler death prediction, published here a little while ago, was old. I hadn't happened to hear it before. A week after it appeared, one of the wire services carried a Monterey, Cal., dispatch giving the same yarn with a slightly different twist. Thus I wasn't the only one. Curious how such tales keep bobbing up. Comes to mind the corpse in the subway, the woman who died of leprosy in a hotel bedroom, the old woman hitch-hiker who, when given a lift, disappeared from the back seat, the famous "Jersey devil" and a number of others, always told by the friend of a friend who'd had the experience. And possibly, the foundation for a fine lot of American folklore.

Pictures: Chastised a bit with Miss Betty Broadbent, the "tattooed Venus" in the Strange As It Seems building at the World's fair. It seems that Miss Broadbent, blonde and lovely, has to wear two pairs of stockings whenever she appears in public because of the decorations on her legs. She loves to dance but never can wear an evening gown. She has nice shoulders but there is an American eagle extending from one to the other. Though tattooed from the nape of her shapely neck to her heels, on her body is the picture of only one living person—Colonel Lindbergh. She also declared that when she decided to become a tattooed girl she ordered a large picture first so if she lost her nerve, she couldn't back out.

Salutes: To Katharine Cornell for her excellent portrayal of an actress in "No Time for Comedy." . . . To Katharine Hepburn for her simulation of a girl of wealth in "The Philadelphia Story." . . . To young Sidney Lumet for the way he acts the poet's son in "My Heart's in the Highlands." . . . To that wonderfully garbed grand dame who took three dirty-faced gamins into a swank midtown soda dispensary, loaded them up with ice cream and sent them away each clutching a half dollar. . . . To John Chapman for his third avenue columns, which are satires of Broadway gossip columns.

End Piece: Ira Wolfert was driving to a Brooklyn hospital with his two children. Each had to have an immediate tonsil operation. He thought on the youngsters, he passed a red light. A policeman stopped him. He tried to explain the circumstances. The officer wouldn't listen. So Wolfert went to traffic court, waited all morning and paid a fine. It's tough to be a cop. And it's tough to be the father of two sick children.

Nazi Medical Cost Rises; Blame Elderly Laborers

WASHINGTON.—A report to the commerce department from the American consul at Frankfurt-on-Main said Germany's medicine bill jumped 8 per cent in 1938 to $104,000,000. The 1938 expenditure per person, the report said, was $2.98, compared with $1.40 in 1929. "The increased expenditure per person is said to have resulted largely from bringing into employment older and less robust persons, the report added.

Rondout Lodge Has Last Meeting In Old Quarters

Instituted as a lodge of Masons in 1854, Rondout Lodge, No. 343, R. & A. M., held its last meeting in the lodge rooms in the Masonic Building, Broadway and Strand, where it had met since it was instituted, on Monday evening when appropriate services marked the occasion.

When the lodge reopens following the summer vacation it will meet in the new Masonic Temple on Albany avenue.

At the closing session last evening the lodge named Past District Deputy Grand Master Charles H. Gregory as chairman of the lodge committee which will meet with Past District Deputy Grand Master Roger H. Loughran, chairman of the committee from Kingston Lodge, No. 10, to arrange for the dedication services of the Masonic Temple in the fall.

The meeting last evening not only marked the last meeting in the lodge rooms where the lodge has been meeting for the past 85 years, but also the last meeting before the summer vacation.

An interesting history of the lodge since its institution 85 years ago was given by Past District Deputy Grand Master Samuel Stern.

Johannes D. Hasbrouck was the first Master of Rondout Lodge. The second Master of the lodge was Lorenzo A. Sykes, who took an active part in the exercises in connection with the opening of the Delaware and Hudson Canal at Edenville. A portrait in oil of Worshipful Brother Sykes adorns the lodge rooms.

The speaker called attention to the fact that Rondout Lodge had taken an important part through its influence for every good and every commendable object which has come to its attention, not only for the benefit of the Craft, but the world at large.

During the World War, Rondout Lodge was represented in the defense of the country by the service of many of its members.

Following the last communication in the old lodge rooms ice cream, strawberries and coffee were served, and a social hour enjoyed.

Work on remodeling the former Gray residence on Albany avenue, near the Governor Clinton Hotel, into a modern Masonic Temple is progressing and it is expected that the Temple will be ready when the two Masonic lodges resume regular communications in the fall.

On October 8, 1929, Rondout Lodge celebrated its 75th anniversary with a dinner served in the chapel of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, which was followed by the anniversary services in the church auditorium.

Grand Master, John A. Dutton and Deputy Grand Master, Charles H. Johnson, of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of New York, were guests of honor at the celebration.

Attorney Robert G. Groves, Master of Rondout Lodge, presided at the anniversary services.

PEACE—ON WAR BASIS

There is food for thought in a recent statement of Virginia Gayda, leading Fascist editor. He was speaking to an interviewer about the need of the axis powers for more territory, beginning with their former colonies. This earth, he said, has enough for all the peoples who inhabit it. Two of them—England and France—are bulging with superfluous lands. Two others—Italy and Germany—have not enough space to live on. The only solution of the problem lies in division of territories. There need be no war to solve it, he said, but there can be no peace until it is solved.

Should he not have reversed the order? May not peace be necessary before the solution can be worked out? Real peace, that is, not the militaristic deadlock in which the world now marks time.

"Even if the supreme disaster of war should be avoided," said Secretary Hull the other day, "the gigantic waste of human energies and material resources involved in the widespread construction of armaments on the present scale must inevitably exact a fearful toll in the general economic and social deterioration throughout the world. The result can only be to put many nations on drastically reduced rations of civilized existence for a long time to come."

But how can the start be made? How can the nations disarm, get their military establishments back into productive work, get their commerce to moving, get their hatreds stopped? It is almost as huge and difficult a task as it would be if the many mobilized armies had actually been fighting a war these last two years.

MEN AND FISHES

Prayers nowadays go out not only for those who "go down to the sea in ships" but still more for those who go under the sea in ships. The submarine, adding a third dimension to navigation, has solved difficult problems and developed new arts and skills, but is still in the trial stage.

Unexpected accidents still happen. Unforeseen perils develop. The problem is so complex that it may be generations before man can navigate the sea below the surface as securely as he does on the surface. The submarine is older than the airplane, but grows more slowly in safety and efficiency.

Americans, still mourning the death of so many fine young men on the Squalus, sorrowed with Englishmen last week for a submarine crew lost under almost the same conditions. It will doubtless be wise to go on developing such craft, in spite of the peril involved, even if by some miracle the world should come into a golden age of peace. They have great possibilities aside from their naval value, for salvaging, exploring and scientific work of various kinds.

The more men consider a problem like this, the more they may appreciate fishes. The latter solved it so long ago, and so completely, that they have forgotten there is any such problem.

HOMESICK FOR THE PAST

You can learn a lot about folks at a big world's fair. An old timer from Coney Island set up his snapshot booth on the Midway of the World of Tomorrow. He prepared a new backdrop showing the trylon and perisphere, with more or less futuristic suggestions of other World's Fair buildings.

He has plenty of customers, but he finds they mostly shun his fancy new scenery and ask to have their pictures taken in the old-fashioned horse and buggy he had been using for the last thirty years at Coney Island. He thinks now he'll get out his oldest prop, a stuffed ox and ox-cart. He believes it will be even more popular.

A philosopher could probably make something of this situation. People fed up with the world of today and a little dubious about the world of tomorrow—at least as forecast by the fair promoters—turn contentedly, even wistfully, to the world of yesterday for relaxation and pleasure.

LOCAL REFORM—WHOSE JOB?

The Federal Department of Justice seems to be entering upon a crusade to clean up corrupt city government. A conspicuous example has been the successful prosecution of Boss Tom Pendegast in Kansas City.

This sort of activity seems, to many, the duty of the city governments themselves, or of their state governments if the cities fail to protect themselves from crime and exploitation. The national government has plenty to do in handling strictly Federal problems. And it is far better, for the principle and practice of self-government, for the cities and states to do their own jobs and clean their own streets.

If such tasks are unloaded upon an already overburdened government at Washington, it can probably add them to its load. Whether done locally or nationally, it is imperative that government throughout the country be cleaned up and made honest and effective. But if Washington has to do it, then Washington can properly demand that states and cities quit criticizing the Federal authorities for "intruding in their affairs."

We wouldn't be surprised if this country is suffering right now from too much salvation. Too many people trying to save it, in too many different ways, according to their lights.

More evidence that the heart of America is sound—there's a popular demand for weather maps again.

This "drafting" of presidential candidates isn't so rough as it seems. They're all willing to make the sacrifice.

Our Decoration Day parades might be called "military", but they are not "militaristic."

This is a building year. Build something, even if it's only a castle in the air.

We Americans, anyway, seem destined to have vacations as usual this summer.

The Germans have more and more war equipment and less and less household goods.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act. INJECTING HEMORRHOIDS OR PILES

While examining recruits for overseas service, cases of severe varicose veins in the legs were rejected. Some were so anxious to go overseas that they underwent operation and were later accepted. Cases of varicose veins in lower end of large intestine—hemorrhoids or piles—were likewise rejected unless they underwent operation.

Today in the great majority of cases operation is unnecessary as the injection of these varicose veins in the leg or bowel usually brings about a cure in a few weeks. The injection method, while known at the time, had been discredited to a considerable extent because of the failure of the sclerosing or hardening materials to work properly.

Hemorrhoids or piles are particularly distressing due to their pain, bleeding, and itching, yet many suffer for years with them rather than undergo the expense, danger, and loss of time, made necessary by operation. However, operation is not necessary now in a large number of cases due to the skill of the surgeon and the effectiveness of the sclerosing or hardening solution which "dries up" the hemorrhoid.

Dr. Lynn Krouse, St. Louis, in the Journal of the Missouri State Medical Association says: "There are three methods of procedure used in treating hemorrhoids: first, surgery, which is invaluable in certain types of cases; second, injection which has merited use in a large group of cases; and third, palliation—giving relief with ointments and suppositories."

From a group of 100 cases, 75 were selected for the injection treatment, ranging in age from 16 to 86 years. The interval between treatments was from five to ten days. Pain, bleeding and the protrusion (piles coming outside) improved following the first and second injections. All cases showed the general effect upon the individuals such as nervousness, lack of endurance, and emotional disturbances. The hemorrhoids returned in less than 10 percent of the cases which is not as large a percentage as by operation.

It is not the hard laborers but usually the office group with irregular diet habits that are mostly afflicted with hemorrhoids.

Remember, some cases can only be cured by surgery, but there is a large number of sufferers who can obtain relief by this injection method, who could thus rid themselves with little expense of this ailment which, aside from its pain and discomfort, greatly depresses the entire nervous system.

Senator C. T. Stagg Explains Negative Vote on Resolution

THE SENATE STATE OF NEW YORK ALBANY 220 North Tioga Street Ithaca, New York May 31, 1939

Mr. Louis R. Netter, The Kingston Daily Freeman, Kingston, New York. Dear Sir:

I acknowledge your letter of May 22nd relative to my negative vote on the resolution concerning the so-called Albany Investigation.

This resolution was introduced on March 6th by Senator Wicks and Assemblyman Conway. The resolution in its original form carried an appropriation of $75,000.00 payable from the contingent fund of the legislature. In the Senate Finance Committee and was not reported by that Committee. In the Assembly, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. On May 10th the resolution was reported out by the Ways and Means Committee with the provisions for an appropriation eliminated, and the amended resolution was adopted by the Assembly. On May 11th the amended Assembly resolution was referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee, and reported out by that Committee on May 19th. In the meantime, on May 9th, Senator Wicks had introduced a bill providing for an appropriation of $250,000.00 for the use of a joint legislative committee to investigate the affairs of the City and County of Albany, this bill being referred to the Senate Finance Committee and never reported by that Committee.

The vote on the Assembly resolution was taken at the close of a long session, my recollection being that the vote in the Senate was on May 19th, the day before adjournment, when many important measures were under consideration.

I have been much concerned with State expenditures, believing that the only way to reduce taxes is to curtail spending. I did not believe, and I do not now believe, that an expenditure of $250,000.00 for an investigation was justified, and I was opposed to Senator Wicks' bill of May 9th making an appropriation of that amount. At the time the vote on the resolution was taken in the Senate it was impossible to amend the appropriation bill reducing the amount of the appropriation without an emergency message from the Governor, and the Governor had formally notified the Legislature that emergency messages would not be given. Therefore, if the resolution were adopted on May 19th, provision for an appropriation for the Committee would have to be included in the supplementary budget to be passed on May 20th. At the time the vote was taken on the resolution in the Senate I had no information as to the amount which would be included in the supplementary budget for the use of the Committee if the resolution were adopted. I did not feel justified in voting for the resolution and then find an item in the supplementary budget making an appropriation for the use of the Committee in an amount which I could not approve. The passage of the supplementary budget on the last day of the session was necessary. I refused to be placed in the position of having to vote for the supplementary budget which might contain an amount for the committee which I might deem excessive. Presumably, the interested parties would have asked for the inclusion of an appropriation of $250,000.00, the amount specified in the Senator Wicks' bill.

If the sponsors of the resolution had demanded action before the last hours of the session so that the World's Fair, the various buildings and definite information as to the amount of the appropriation, the result might have been different. Yours truly, C. T. STAGG.

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer should have known the interested parties who sought the Albany county investigation were not concerned in an appropriation but were concerned in getting an investigation started, letting the legislature fix the amount of finance such investigation. This attitude was known or should have been known to any interested legislator. Assemblyman Conway was at no time consulted by Mr. Stagg as to the resolution or the amount required to conduct such investigation. Assemblyman Conway has stated he would have approved any amount which was sufficient to finance the investigation. As to inclusion of any amount in the supplementary budget that matter would have been subject to amendment. Senator Stagg would have an opportunity to pass on the supplementary budget and if he thought the appropriation made in it was too large it was his right to move to amend the supplementary budget by striking out all or reducing the amount.

Sovereignty of States to Regulate Business Within Its Border, Appears to Have Vanished

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, June 6—Whatever vestige of sovereignty the states have retained, so far as the power to regulate business and commerce within their borders is concerned, appears now to have vanished and to have been superseded by the unlimited power of congress, judging by the latest decision of the Supreme Court of the United States and other decisions at the present term of the court.

Heretofore, the producers of goods could argue that they were not subject to federal control. But now the supreme court says that milk producers who pass their milk on to handlers within a state are subject to federal authority because the milk may possibly go outside the state. Earlier this year, the court held that a company engaged in making sports wear garments for women and employing just a few workers was subject to federal authority, even though the goods might not go outside the state, because a strike of the few employees might affect interstate commerce. Just how the nation could suffer any hardship if a few less sports garments were made is hard to understand, but that's the verdict from on high.

The gradual stretching of the power of congress to regulate the internal concerns of the businesses of every state in the union has been upheld by a court in which four out of the nine are appointees of President Roosevelt. In the latest case, that relating to price-fixing of milk by federal order, the four Roosevelt appointees voted together, and with the aid of Justice Stone, who is reported to be slated for appointment as chief justice, in the event of the retirement of Mr. Hughes, the congressional power to regulate interstate commerce, irrespective of state lines, appears to have been sustained.

It has been a gradual evolution—this stretching of the commerce clause of the constitution to cover purely intra-state transactions—by little by little, in case after case, the complete and absolute authority of the congress to regulate production, on the ground that it does or may affect interstate commerce, has been established as the supreme law of the land, subject only to reversal by the people at the polls.

If the present trend of decisions is continued, the state governments will find themselves with only the function of exercising the police power—the maintenance of order—though already congress is stepping into that field with a federal bureau of detection.

There would not be so much criticism if Congress really did the legislating and made rules for the conduct of interstate commerce. This would be a democratic process. But, under the present system, the Congress delegates almost unlimited authority to the executive bureaus. Thus, the Chief Executive is given, through his agencies and bureaus, virtual control of the law-making process as Congress shirks its responsibility. One-man rule today is not the result of much of one man's ambition as the complete breakdown of congressional independence, which though occasionally assertive, is, on the whole, subservient to executive political control.

HUDSON RIVER STEAMBOATS

These articles are written from the collection of George W. Murdock, veteran marine engineer.

No. 94—William F. Romer
Serving the first nine years of her existence in Southern waters, the "William F. Romer" came to the Rondout creek in 1890 and plowed the waters of the Hudson for another quarter of a century before the junk dealer claimed her. During her career on the sight to lovers of the river steamboats, and her passing brought to a close another chapter in the vast and interesting history of the steamboats of the Hudson river.

James Clark built the hull of this vessel in 1881 at Baltimore, Maryland. Her keel was 221 feet 7 inches long, breadth of beam 52 feet 9 inches, depth of hold 12 feet 3 inches. Her gross tonnage was listed at 880, net tonnage at 503, and she was powered by a vertical beam engine with a cylinder diameter of 56 inches with an 11 foot stroke.

Launched under the name of "Mason L. Weems," the steamboat known to people of this area as the "William F. Romer," plied the waters of the Chesapeake Bay between Baltimore and Fredericksburg and up the Rappahannock river, carrying freight and passengers. The "Mason L. Weems" was the fastest steamboat on Chesapeake Bay at the time she appeared. She had extensive accommodations for passengers and a large freight capacity.

In the winter of 1890 Romer & Tremper purchased from the Cornell Steamboat Company the passenger and freight line between Rondout and New York. The previous year, under the Cornell banner, the steamboats "City of Kingston" and "James W. Baldwin" had been in service on this line, and when Romer & Tremper acquired the line they purchased the "Mason L. Weems" to run in line with the "James W. Baldwin."

The new steamboat had her name changed to the "William F. Romer," and her first trip for the Romer & Tremper interests saw Captain William Van Keuren in charge with William Mable and Joel Rightmeyer as pilots.

The "James W. Baldwin" and the "William F. Romer" ran in line until 1899 when the Romer & Tremper fleet was purchased by the Central Hudson Steamboat Company. Under the new ownership the line boasted four steamboats—the "William F. Romer," "James W. Baldwin," "M. Martin" and "Jacob H. Tremper."

Concerning speed records—the "William F. Romer," in the year 1899, made the run from New York to Rondout in five hours and 21 minutes, including seven landings. This was considered good time and placed the "William F. Romer" in a class with the faster steamboats running on the river.

One mishap recorded in the history of the "William F. Romer" concerns the early morning of July 1, 1897, when she ran on the flats near Esopus Lighthouse mist. She ran so high and dry on the flats that the bottoms of her paddle wheels were five feet out of the water at low time. The passengers aboard the grounded vessel were taken off and brought to Rondout, her freight was removed and pontoons were used to float her off the flats.

The "William F. Romer" ran until the fall of 1913 when she was laid up at Newburgh. In 1920 the Central Hudson Steamboat Company sold the steamboat to a Newburgh junk dealer, and everything of value was removed from her hull. The hull was purchased for scrap purposes at Esopus, and when Romer & Tremper landed on the upper Hudson river—the history of another of the Hudson river steamboats was closed.

Know How to Speak Up

Before an Audience

Elected president of the Women's Auxiliary, Mrs. Smith doesn't stammer awkwardly, "I—er—I hope I can make good..." She studied public speaking at home, knows correct ways to address an audience. Her speech on taking office begins, "Madam Chairman, fellow members and friends, my feelings of gratitude are mixed with a sense of my responsibility."

Easily she continues, strikes the right note by telling what the club has done for her as well as what she plans to do for it—and ends with an appeal for cooperation.

And what poise Mrs. Smith has! She doesn't clutch at chair or table, teeter on her toes—but stands gracefully, balanced on the balls of her feet.

Another error she avoids is speaking in a boring monotone. She's practiced a simple exercise to add color to her voice. Using a common phrase, "What do you mean?" she expresses different emotions—surprise, reproach, pleasure.

Such simple training will do wonders for you too. Find how to address an audience, parliamentary forms in our 32-page booklet. Give pointers on developing your voice, preparing speeches. Advises radio speakers, toastmasters.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of PUBLIC SPEAKING SELF-TAUGHT to Kingston Daily Freeman, Home Service, 635 Sixth Ave., New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of book-let.

This vogue for "mixing"

Women are collecting Spode. Not because it is antique. Spode is ageless! But because they covet all its patterns. They come to us for a cup and saucer in each, and when they serve coffee to their friends -- every guest has a different pattern to admire! (Mixing Spode colors and designs is an imaginative new idea.)

Women eager to possess Spode will be glad to hear we have just received three more famous patterns -- Anne Hathaway, Camilla, and Mayflower. The colors are blue, orchid, and ivory-white. The new lower prices (a reduction of approximately 20 per cent) are still in effect. Decide to get your Spode now. We'll arrange budget payments if you like.

Can you, then, think of anything more appropriate than to fly the flag from your home on Flag Day, June 14? Moral: Freeman ads can make shopping easier!

Locating the best shopping values by searching each store for them is like hunting the proverbial needle in the haystack by removing a straw at a time. It's apt to be a tiresome nerve wracking and time wasting procedure in any case. And an unnecessary one as well.

Kingston stores offer many sound values — there's no gainsaying that. But ordinarily some one store features several outstanding bargains which could be hidden in the haystack of its tremendous stock of merchandise.

The best way to find a needle in a haystack is to use a magnet. And, as a corollary, the best way to find "best buys" is to use a magnet — the Freeman Ads. You'll save yourself time, trouble, and money by using this handy value-magnet to plan your shopping!

Plan Bus Service For Ulster Co. Day At World's Fair

Secretary Albert Kurdt of the executive committee of the Ulster County Council which has been making arrangements for participation in Ulster County-Kingston Day at the World's Fair—June 26—announced this morning that the committee soon would place on sale tickets covering round trip by bus to New York and admission to the fair at a total cost of $3 a person. The committee has reserved six buses, three each from the Greyhound and Adirondack Lines, providing transportation for 198 persons. The tickets will be on sale within a few days and may be secured at the Farm Bureau office. Plans also provide for placing them on sale at other points in the county. It will be a case of "first come first served" with 198 tickets the limit so far as present arrangements are concerned.

Plans for railroad transportation are still under consideration. Mr. Kurdt states that where 25 tickets are sold from any one point, the West Shore will make a special rate of $2.75 for the trip. If a guarantee of 300 can be secured the road will make a low rate of $1.80.

The admission tickets will be in the nature of a souvenir of the day, the stub being used for admission at the gate and the balance of the ticket being returned to the holder. These tickets, which will be sold at the regular admission price, will be available to all who intend to visit the fair on Ulster County Day, whether they make the trip by bus, train or by private car. They will be on sale in the county in the near future.

Mr. Kurdt said this morning that he understood that the Jacobson Shirt factory employees had chartered a special bus for the day and that among others a group at Ulster Park is considering the proposition to run a bus from that place.

Rignall Named No. 8 Principal

young lady in question, I do believe that appointments of this nature may lead to abuses. When it is known and understood that board members may make appointments of their close kin to board positions, it is inevitable that we shall have individuals striving to become members of the board primarily for the purpose of giving their close relatives employment.

"Whenever a candidate possessing such relationship is considered, I believe that it is almost impossible to regard him or her with the same objectivity and impartiality as though the board were dealing with an individual who had no close sponsor present."

"I believe, finally, that the practice to which I have referred will undermine the confidence of the community in the disinterestedness of board policies."

"I regret that it is necessary for me to take this position with regard to the daughter of a member of the board who has devoted many years of intelligent and unselfish service to his duties."

Mr. Katz at one time during the discussion asked whether it would relieve the situation if he submitted his resignation to the mayor. The board members replied that his past services on the board urged that he do not take this step.

Under the education law a close relative of a member of a board of education may be voted to a position in a school system by a two-thirds vote of the board. The vote in other cases is a majority vote.

On the vote taken on the appointment of Miss Katz the vote was 7 in favor of adoption of the committee's recommendation of Miss Katz and one in opposition.

Committee Report

The balance of the committee recommendations were unanimously approved. The report of the committee as made by Trustee Remmert was:

"Raymond Rignall, principal of School No. 1, to principalship of No. 8. Mr. Rignall has been teaching in the Kingston system for several years, as eighth grade teacher in school No. 6 and as principal of school No. 1. His salary will be $2,000."

"For the vacancy in school No. 4, caused by the resignation of Anna Decker, recommend a graduate of Kingston High School and of New Paltz Normal, with experience as a substitute in Kingston schools; salary $1,100."

"For the vacancy in school No. 7, caused by the resignation of Elizabeth DeWitt, Harold Darling, a graduate of Kingston High School and of New Paltz Normal. He has three years of successful experience in rural school teaching. His extra curricular interests are music and athletic activities. Salary $1,175."

"Miss Carolyn Arnold of school No. 2 has offered her resignation so she may take her retirement. For this position the committee has designated Anna Whitbeck, a graduate of Kingston High School and New Paltz Normal, with three years of successful experience in a rural school and has substituted in the Kingston schools for a period of time. Salary $1,175."

"Miss Marie Sheppard of school No. 5 has submitted her resignation to take effect at the close of this school year. The committee submits the appointment of Julietta M. Netter, a resident of Kingston, a graduate of New Paltz Normal School and several years of successful experience. Salary $1,175."

"As principal for school No. 1, Stephen Hyatt, a graduate of Kingston High School, New Paltz Normal, Albany State College with degree of B. S. in Education. He has had four years of successful experience as principal of the school in Pine Hill. He is highly recommended by his district superintendent. His salary will be $1,600."

It was stated by Superintendent Van Ingen that the application of Miss Katz for a permanent position in the teaching staff of Kingston school system had been on file since 1935.

The board then adjourned and took up the matter of making up the annual school budget. It is expected that this budget will be ready for submission to the board at the next regular meeting.

Refugees' Liner Sails for Germany

once the ship reached Hamburg, Dedrick said:

"They will be put ashore. They are not our problem."

Bernard H. Sandler, an attorney representing groups interested in the refugees, said Dedrick had assured him that if he would put up a $50,000 bond the ship could be brought back. He said $6,000 had been pledged.

"If nobody will take these refugees," Sandler said, "we will appeal to President Roosevelt to send an emergency message to Congress to suspend the immigration law until the status of these unfortunates can be determined. I believe Congress will give them temporary asylum here when it is made plain they are returning to certain death in Germany."

Sandler previously had sent a wireless to the St. Louis asking the master to head toward the American shore and anchor within the international line.

It is well to remember that if you drive faster than 60 it may cost you 50.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)

If Detroit's Tommy Bridges has any political leanings, this certainly is an opportune time for him to announce for office.

That four-hit 3-0 pitching masterpiece he turned in yesterday against the Yankees—the first time they have been shut out since the Browns did it June 18, 1938—has made him baseball's man of the moment. The votes he'd get from other members of the harassed American League pitching corps would give him a pretty fair head start on any other candidate.

The downfall of the Yankees (actually their eighth loss in 41 games—added some fire to what Coach Del Baker of the Tigers has said publicly—that he'd battle 'em to the last ditch and concede nothing).

While Messrs. Greenberg, Higgins, Fox and Rogell were reviving hopes of making a race out of the American League, the siege guns of the National League, the Cincinnati Reds, boomed ominously again.

As Bucky Walters was limiting the New York Giants to seven hits his mates were kicking three Giant hurlers all over the Polo Grounds, fashioning 16 hits into an impressive 8-2 victory. It was their 18th in their last 22 starts.

The Yankee defeat gave the second place Red Sox a chance to move up a game in the percentage column, but the Sox didn't grasp it, largely because they couldn't solve the offerings of Cleveland's Johnny Allen. Johnny scored a 7-5 victory by keeping most of 13 hits on the scratchy side. He got some help from Earl Averill who banged out his first homer of the season, with two aboard.

The third place White Sox took a cue from the three-hit pitching of Jack Knott and whacked out a 12-1 victory over the none-too-agile Athletics. A couple of homers, by Gee Walker and Ollie Bejma, helped Jack to his first victory in five starts.

Washington and the St. Louis Browns were idle.

Though the rambunctious Reds seem to have a monopoly on the headlines in their circuit, there were some other noteworthy happenings. The seven-hit pitching exhibition put on by Brooklyn's Vito Tamulis was good enough to pace the Flatbushers to a 6-2 win over the Pirates from Pittsburgh.

The Bucs almost got to Vito in the sixth but he weathered that storm and is able to point to his third victory of the year. Truett Sewell didn't find the going quite so smooth and was excused along about the fourth inning, in favor of Mace Brown, who finished for the Bucs.

Like Sewell, the St. Louis Cardinals weren't treated any too well. Max West and Rookie Eddie Miller helped themselves to three homers (West got two) and paced the Boston Bees to a 10-4 victory.

Larry French, Charlie Root and Gene Lillard of the Chicago Cubs were punched around for 13 hits by the Phillies, enough for an 8-7 Philadelphia victory. French was charged with the loss. Dizzy Dean pitched the eighth and didn't allow a hit.

Federation League

The Congregational, who lead the Federation League along with the Presbyterians, each with six wins and but one loss, came close to missing out Monday evening when they played a rejuvenated St. James team. With the score 2 to 0 in favor of St. James the Congregationals went into the last half of the seventh inning and loaded the bases and then proceeded to put on the heat and push over three runs to make the final score 3 to 2 in favor of the Congregational team. There was no home run hitting but a series of events led to the defeat of the Methodist players. Clinton Avenue won 11 to 2 over Albany Avenue Baptists and Fair Street took Hurley by a score of 16 to 3.

This evening the games are: Trinity vs. Wurts Street Baptists at Hasbrouck Park; Trinity M. E. vs. Port Ewen at armory, and Redeemer vs. Ulster Park at Barnmann. Wednesday evening Clinton Avenue plays Hurley and the Fair Street Church will battle the leading Congregationals.

Sheriff Warns Brooklyn Dodgers

New York, June 6 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers—and their fans—had better be good from now on; the sheriff is watching 'em.

Sheriff James V. Mangano of Kings county, after reading about the arguments and scraps among the fans Thursday night when some of those in the unreserved seats rushed into a small reserved section and refused to move out when the ticket holders appeared, sent a letter to Larry MacPhail, Dodgers' president, yesterday, saying he might stop night baseball at Ebbets Field if such disorders were repeated.

"It is obvious that these disorders were a direct result of your failure and inability to cope with a situation which, with adequate attendants would not have given rise to the unfortunate consequences arising therefrom," Mangano wrote. He added he would have men at tomorrow night's Brooklyn-St. Louis game to observe conditions.

Add to the list of major league players on hostile clubs whose off-season interests bring them business contacts—Clyde Castelman, Giants pitcher, who is a dairy-farmer down in Donelson, Tenn., and Jim Turner, of the Bees, 1937 National League pitching champion, whose winter job is supervisor of a milk company's supply system, working out of Nolensville, Tenn., about 20 miles south of the Castelman farms.

Best line on the improved power of the Boston Bees is that it took a 3-hit shutout job by Dizzy Dean to give them their first whitewash of the season. When Old Dizzy turned the trick May 21, every other National League club except the St. Louis Cardinals had been blanked at least once.

Secret of Ernie Lombardi's preeminence in National League batting circles is that the Cincy Red siege-gun doesn't cure what skyline he's batting against. His road batting average every year compares well with his Crosley Field figures. Last year Brooklyn was the only host city in which he batted lower than .300. Chicago was tops with .444.

Canzoneri Loses To Young Blake

It was Blake's sixth professional fight and he made up in speed and stamina for what he lacked in experience. His left jab had the former champion's face a bloody mess as early as the third round.

The ex-champ rocked his younger opponent in the ninth and tenth rounds as he tried desperately for a knockout, but he was never able to catch the elusive Blake with the payoff punch.

Canzoneri weighed 140½, Blake 134.

Some Game!

Springfield, Ill., June 6 (AP)—Scorer Frank Wein was still a bit dizzy today from the job of tabulating hits and runs in the game between Springfield and Decatur in the Three-Eye Baseball League.

His score book showed the following statistics for the nine inning game which Decatur won 15 to 10: Nine home runs, two triples, seven doubles and 15 singles—a total of 71 bases—hammered off the six pitchers used in the slugfest.

Cozy Storace, national amateur welterweight champion, heads the card of bouts slated for Friday night at the municipal auditorium.

Boxing Chairman Ben M. Becker, of the Adirondack A. A. U., today announced five of the seven bouts from his Albany office and said the other two would be made public as soon as reported to him.

Storace, who was the sensation of the national tournament at San Francisco last April, is matched with Sailor Baron of Amsterdam, who comes from the same stable as Dom Peretti, Diamond Belt bantamweight title holder.

"Baron is a good opponent for Storace," said Chairman Becker, who keeps close watch on his matches, "and should put up a scrap that will have the Kingston fans cheering all the way."

Storace, who spent almost a month on the west coast after winning his title, resumed training two weeks ago for the Baron fight, and reports that he's almost at his peak, feeling as well as he did for the Frisco tourney.

Tony Storace, brother of the "Rome Jumping Jack," a former pro battler, sees to it that Cozy is in shape for all of his fights, and can be credited with piloting him to the 145-pound national amateur title.

Supporting the Storace-Baron match are the following pairings: Carmine Virgilio vs. Tony Garret. These two Poughkeepsieans will clash out in the auditorium ring to settle a grudge.

Buddy Lananahan, Amsterdam, vs. Les Brown of Albany.

Joe Bliss, Ellenville heavyweight, vs. Art Ramsey, Glens Falls, the heavyweight who went to San Francisco with the Adirondack A. A. U. team.

Charlie Raigins, Saugerties, vs. Eddie Yovella, Poughkeepsie.

Efforts are being made to match Jess Caprotti of Kingston with Mort Latimer, if the Newburgh boy will accept the offer to box, and Tiny Townsend may be seen in action in the seventh pairing.

Washington, D. C.—Joe Archibald, 124½, Providence, R. I., outpointed Jose Silva, 127½, Philadelphia, (10).

Buffalo, N. Y.—Harris Blake, 134, Buffalo, outpointed Tony Canzoneri, 140½, former Kingston weight champion, New York, (10).

Pittsburgh—Fritzie Zivic, 146, Pittsburgh, outpointed Kenny LaSalle, 146½, Houston, Tex., (10).

Windsor, Ont.—Orville Drouillard, 137, Windsor, knocked out Jimmy Harper, 135, Cincinnati, (5).

Dayton, O.—Buddy Knox, 187, Dayton, stopped Leroy Haynes, 152, Philadelphia, (2).

Baltimore—Pete Galiano, Baltimore, and Frankie Terranova, New York, drew (10) (lightweights).

Toronto — Dave Castilloux, 130½, Montreal, outpointed Joey Baginato, 131½, Toronto, (10). Castilloux won Canadian lightweight title.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

Chapter 32

Fire!

BEFORE dinner that night Jocelyn went in to see old Mack. It was the first time she had visited him since Thorndyke's tragic denouement of how the old man had swindled him out of the Russell inheritance. She went because Gramp was the only person she felt she could really talk to.

He was alone in his room, poring over a sheet of pale blue paper. When he looked up she saw that tears had dampened the network of wrinkles about his eyes.

"Am I intruding, Gramp?" she asked hesitantly.

"Tosh and nonsense!" he exclaimed. "Come right in and set down here by me. What's this I hear 'bout Kensing rentin' a room here?"

"You hear everything, don't you, Gramp?"

"Yep. Nothin' wrong with my ears."

"Yes, Geoffrey's staying here." Defiance tinged her voice. "He wants to make up."

"You got any ideas 'bout it?" "I suppose I will agree. I—I've known him so long. I—I've said to him, Gramp. And I could fill up my life with children and parties and trips and . . ."

"Horses!" Gramp snorted. "Might as well marry a horse and be done with it," he grumbled. "He's a two-legged horse and a mean one."

"He isn't really mean," she protested mildly. "I can handle him very well."

"Oughtn't to marry a man you can handle! Josie, I'm disappointed in you. I figured you had lots of fight and gumption. Why in tarnation are you lettin' a blonde snatch the man you want?"

"I thought you liked Nola," she evaded.

"Didn't say I didn't. But she ain't the one for Tally. She won't make him happy. She's got too much money. She'll go a-draggin' him off to fancy places and he'll be mighty miserable." He tapped the letter on his lap with a crooked forefinger.

"I kept this hid, Josie, ever since I found it quite a spell back. Your grandma and me used to put notes in a secret drawer in the old cabinet when we was courtin'. Jest for old times' sake I tried to see if I still knew how to open it when we come here. I—I run across a letter to me—she must have figured some day I'd come along and maybe find it. She wrote it just . . . jest afore she died . . ."

Silently, he handed the letter to Jocelyn and silently she accepted it and read in her grandmother's familiar handwriting:

"Talbot, My Dear—
I write this in the fond hope that some day your eyes will read it. No one else knows or ever has known of this secret place of ours. I have just finished making out my will and, although the doctor will not tell me I am dying, I know. I do not want to die, Talbot. Does anyone ever want to die? I think not. For many years, through my solicitors, I have followed the adventures of your family. I know your grandson is a fine young man, unspoiled by money, and selfish in his devotion to you and the others. I am hoping that this sentimental, seemingly inconsistent will of mine will be the means of bringing together my granddaughter Jocelyn, and your grandson. I want them to be poor. I trust Thorndyke, my eldest grandchild, to see to that. I want them to build a future together, solidly love and marry, with hardship and trouble shared and overcome."

I should never have run away from you. Years of empty living have given me that bitter knowledge. I loved you, Talbot. I never stopped. But we were of the generation who laid in the beds we made for ourselves regardless of thorns . . ."

Sandy's Growl

JOCELYN could read no farther. For the last lines were blurred and stained with tears. Folding the letter carefully, she placed it in Gramp's hand, then went swiftly from the room, her eyes misted by deep compassion.

Dinner went badly. Nola, cool and exquisitely groomed, was monosyllabic; Jocelyn, aching with grief, had no appetite for either talk or food. Thorndyke and Geoffrey attempted light conversation, finally desisting as their efforts fell flat. Only the odd little man, Fred Jones, appeared to relish his food. He spoke but once during the meal, to inquire with strange intensity if the fog was as thick tonight as last night.

Nola, excusing herself from the table, walked to the long windows and glanced out of doors. She said, as if thinking aloud, "I wish Bob and Gretchen weren't going to town to that movie tonight. It's bad driving on the highway in this fog."

No one offered comment and she went on through the house to the back door. Mr. Jones announced his intention of walking in the fog and went upstairs for his overcoat. Thorndyke replenished the logs in the drawing-room fireplace, drew up a card table, and suggested three-handed bridge.

Jocelyn could not concentrate on her game. After losing three contracts she gave up, leaving the two men at the chess board.

By midnight everyone had gone to his room. The house was dark and quiet. Jocelyn, unable to sleep, lay staring into the blackness which was relieved just a little by fog swirling through the windows. She felt its dampness on her face, in her nostrils, against the roof of her mouth. It depressed her. She was grateful for Sandy who lay sleeping at the foot of the bed, half of his small body across her feet. His alive warmth was comforting.

Sandy must have dozed, for Sandy's low growl startled her from a depth of unreality. He rolled to his feet and, growling all of the while, caught the bed covers in his teeth and tried to pull them from her body.

"Stop it, Sandy!" she scolded. "I never knew you to want to play in the middle of the night. Stop, you crazy pup!"

Hearing her voice, perceiving she was awake, he jumped from the bed and ran to the window, barked with low warning yips. Fearing he would wake someone, Jocelyn slipped to the floor intending to grab him, but he evaded her and began barking loudly and furiously.

Then, through the fog, she heard voices. Unhooking the screen and pushing it outward she leaned over the windowsill. It was the cook who was screaming. Shouting . . . shrieking "Fire! Fire!"

Wailing Siren

NOW through a sudden rift in the gray mist Jocelyn saw flames spurring from the rear of the house where the additional rooms for the servants had been built of wood.

Switching on the bed lamp she took her slacks from the closet and put them on over her pajama trousers, then drew a heavy sweater over the tops. She slipped her feet into fleece-lined moccasins and sped out the door.

Running around the side of the house she nearly collided with Tally who was attaching a garden hose to the outside water faucet. He, too, had dressed hastily in overall pants and a thin cotton shirt. His hair hung over his forehead; his lips were set tightly.

"How bad is it?" Jocelyn cried. "A couple of rooms at the back. Your servants got out in time. If I can only catch it before it spreads any farther . . . I wish Bob would get home."

"I'll call the fire department in Santa Barbara," she said, turning back to the house. "Shouldn't take them more than ten minutes to get here."

"Good girl!" Rushing outside again she saw Tally, almost in the flames, wishing the hose back and forth. The stream of water seemed a futile weapon against the fiery monster which grew in size with every moment.

"The fire department's on the way!" she shouted at him.

Mrs. McKee, her gray hair hanging in a ridiculous pigtail over one shoulder, kept pleading with Tally to get away from the fire. Geoffrey charged around the house with the speed of one of his ponies and started ordering everybody to stand back and not become excited. He was careful, Jocelyn noted, to keep well away from the flames.

"Why don't you find another hose and help Tally?" she demanded of him.

"It won't do any good," he declared. "Might as well wait until the firemen arrive."

"Where is Thorndyke . . . Nola?" "Dragging furniture and clothing out of the rooms."

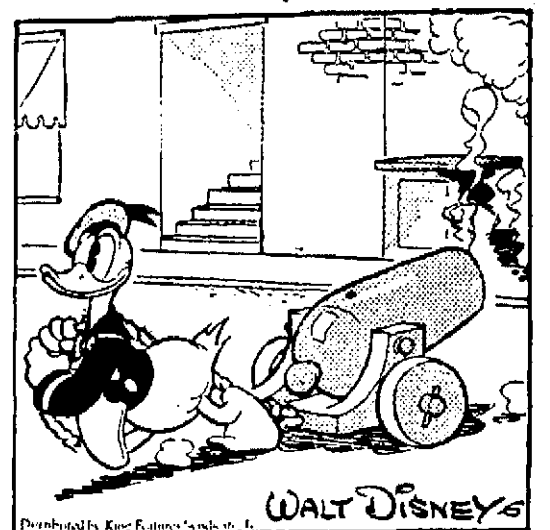

"Then go and stop them," she ordered. "If you had eyes in your head, you'd see that Tally will be able to keep the fire from catching the main rooms until the . . . oh, Geoff, it's spread to the fence . . . it's burning the garden!"

A second siren froze her, then tore to the stables, flung open the doors and began throwing a halter on the nearest horse. In a moment the wind might change and drive the fire toward the inflammable hay bales next the stables.

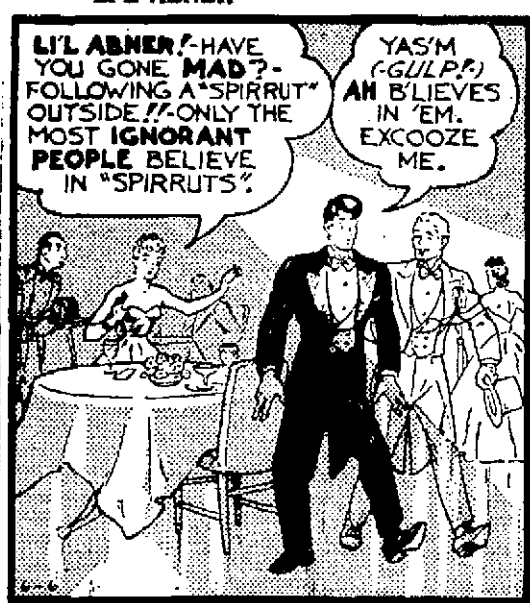

The wailing scream of a siren stopped her. She hurried, panting, toward the helmeted men who sprang from the truck. Tally, his face blackened by smoke, his mouth cracked and parched by heat, directed them. It seemed like a space of mere seconds until the last angry flame had sputtered out under the heavy chemical spray from the fire truck.

"The court is now trying to collect said $9."

Scouts Hold Third Camp-o-ree at Armory Grounds

The third annual camp-o-ree of the Boy Scouts from the Ulster-Greene Council was held over the week-end at the New York State Armory grounds on Manor avenue. Approximately 550 boys and 60 Scoutmasters pitched their tents for the three days' stay. The picture taken from the roof of the armory shows the Scouts and their directors as they stood at attention before the reviewing stand prior to the presentation of the circus Saturday afternoon.

HELPERS—The true measure of the success or failure of a man is to be found in his deeds, not in his dollars. The way you treat your fellowmen is far more important to the world than the size of a swollen bank account. No man is a failure who has helped others.

What's so tough about that?
Friend—You don't know how silly it makes me feel to sit in an empty bathtub and go over myself with a vacuum cleaner.

Units in County To Attend Rally Of Area Legion

Middletown, June 6.—American Legionnaires belonging to Ulster County Posts are planning to attend the Ninth District Mobilization rally which will be held in this city June 10 and 11. The call for the mobilization was issued by District Commander William Burke of Cornwall and will be sponsored by Middletown Post, No. 151.

The veterans will find plenty of entertainment during the two days of mobilization. On the first day, June 10, there will be reunions, concerts and the military ball at the armory in the evening. There will also be dancing and amusement in various places in the city.

One of the features of the first day will be a parade by the fun making part of the legion—the "40 and 8." One of their famous wrecks is scheduled for the evening.

On Sunday, June 11, registration of the attending posts will begin at an early hour at the state armory. At 11 o'clock there will be a military field Mass and special Legion services in all churches. At noon the drum corps competition will get under way at Wilson Field. Over 100 drum corps and bands are entered in the senior and junior classes. At 5 o'clock, 5,000 Legionnaires will be marching in the mobilization parade, one of the largest exhibitions Middletown has ever seen upon its streets.

Beside the Legionnaires from the Ninth District of New York, there will be, as parade guests, the Third District of New York, the Ninth from New Jersey, the 15th from Pennsylvania, the 29th Divisions Posts from New York and other cities. Visitors will find the 156th Field Artillery, New York National Guard, encamped at the St. Alberts Campus. This regiment will lead the mobilization parade. The Guardsmen will demonstrate the working of the large field pieces for the large number of visitors.

Three Cases in Court

Three cases were brought to the attention of Judge Matthew V. Cahill in police court today. William Zannos of Saugerties, arrested Monday afternoon on a charge of public intoxication on North Front street, had his case held until later. Herbert Williamson, a negro, of 215 North street, charged with being a disorderly person in failing to support his wife and four children, had his hearing adjourned. Alex G. Cruikshank of Oneonta, charged with operating a car with defective brakes, was fined $5. Mr. Cruikshank's car struck the rear of another car at Pearl and Fair streets, Monday afternoon. He made good the damage to the other car.

Women sigh for the days when men were men. Men sigh for the days when women weren't.

By L. L. STEVENSON

Speaks: Recently word spread that an old brownstone house rapidly falling into ruin on the outskirts of the Bronx was haunted. The tale ran that the ghost was that of a woman who had been killed there by her husband many years ago. No one saw the ghost but several persons declared that in the darkness of the night they heard unearthly groans. Finally four young men, all deeply interested in psychic phenomena, decided to investigate. Meeting at midnight, they boldly entered the house. What was taken to be a moan or a groan sent three of them out hurriedly. The fourth remained. His companions waited for him breathlessly and just when they had made up their minds to notify the police, out he came. With him he brought not one "ghost" but two. They were a pair of small owls that had evidently decided that a ruined and deserted house made a fine residence.

Zoological: Friends of Medrano and Donna, Hispanic dancers, observed them sneaking in and out of vegetarian restaurants lately. As they seldom eat anything but meat, so much curiosity was aroused that a checkup was made. It seems that on their last trip to Argentina, the dancers acquired a pet ocelot. It's a gorgeous, sleek animal, closely related to the leopard. When young, it makes a playful and entertaining pet. But when it grows older, it reverts to nature and becomes a fierce, meat-eating beast. So, to keep their pet tame and happy, Medrano and Donna have been endeavoring to fool it with a diet of vegetable and meat balls.

Stories: Several correspondents have called attention to the fact that the Hitler death prediction, published here a little while ago, was old. I hadn't happened to hear it before. A week after it appeared, one of the wire services carried a Monterey, Cal., dispatch giving the same yarn with a slightly different twist. Thus I wasn't the only one. Curious how such tales keep bobbing up. Comes to mind the corpse in the subway, the woman who died of leprosy in a hotel bedroom, the old woman hitch-hiker who, when given a lift, disappeared from the back seat, the famous "Jersey devil" and a number of others, always told by the friend of a friend who had the experience. And possibly, the foundation for a fine lot of American folklore.

Pictures: Chatted a bit with Miss Betty Broadbent, the "tattooed Venus" in the Strange As It Seems building at the World's fair. It seems that Miss Broadbent, blonde and lovely, has to wear two pairs of stockings whenever she appears in public because of the decorations on her legs. She loves to dance but never can wear an evening gown. She has nice shoulders but there is an American eagle extending from one to the other. Though tattooed from the nape of her shapely neck to her heels, on her body is the picture of only one living person—Colonel Lindbergh. She also declared that when she decided to become a tattooed girl she ordered a large picture first so if she lost her nerve, she couldn't back out.

Salutes: To Katharine Cornell for her excellent portrayal of an actress in "No Time for Comedy." . . . To Katharine Hepburn for her simulation of a girl of wealth in "The Philadelphia Story." . . . To young Sidney Lumet for the way he acts the poet's son in "My Heart's in the Highlands." . . . To that wonderfully garbed dame who took three dirty-faced gamins into a swank midtown soda dispensary, loaded them up with ice cream and sent them away each clutching a half dollar. . . . To John Chapman for his third avenue columns, which are satires of Broadway gossip columns.

End Piece: Ira Wolfert was driving to a Brooklyn hospital with his two children. Each had to have an immediate tonsil operation. His thoughts on the youngsters, he passed a red light. A policeman stopped him. He tried to explain the circumstances. The officer wouldn't listen. So Wolfert went to traffic court, waited all morning and paid a fine. It's tough to be a cop. And it's tough to be the father of two sick children.

Nazi Medical Cost Rises; Blame Elderly Laborers

WASHINGTON.—A report to the commerce department from the American consul at Frankfurt-on-Main said Germany's medicine bill jumped 8 per cent in 1938 to $104,000,000. The 1938 expenditure per person, the report said, was $2.98, compared with $1.40 in 1929.

"The increased expenditure per person is said to have resulted largely from bringing into employment older and less robust persons, the report added."

Rondout Lodge Has Last Meeting In Old Quarters

Instituted as a lodge of Masons in 1854, Rondout Lodge, No. 343, F. & A. M., held its last meeting in the lodge rooms in the Masonic Building, Broadway and Strand, where it had met since it was instituted, on Monday evening when appropriate services marked the occasion.

When the lodge reopens following the summer vacation it will meet in the new Masonic Temple on Albany avenue.

At the closing session last evening the lodge named Past District Deputy Grand Master Charles H. Gregory as chairman of the lodge committee which will meet with Past District Deputy Grand Master Roger H. Loughran, chairman of the committee from Kingston Lodge, No. 10, to arrange for the dedication services of the Masonic Temple in the fall.

The meeting last evening not only marked the last meeting in the lodge rooms where the lodge has been meeting for the past 85 years, but also the last meeting before the summer vacation.

An interesting history of the lodge since its institution 85 years ago was given by Past District Deputy Grand Master Samuel Stern.

Johannes D. Hasbrouck was the first Master of Rondout Lodge. The second Master of the lodge was Lorenzo A. Sykes, who took an active part in the exercises in connection with the opening of the Delaware and Hudson Canal at Eddyville. A portrait in oils of Worshipful Brother Sykes adorns the lodge rooms.

The speaker called attention to the fact that Rondout Lodge had taken an important part through its influence for every good and every commendable object which has come to its attention, not only for the benefit of the Craft, but the world at large.

During the World War, Rondout Lodge was represented in the defense of the country by the service of many of its members.

Following the last communication in the old lodge rooms ice cream, strawberries and coffee were served, and a social hour enjoyed.

Work on remodeling the former Gray residence on Albany avenue, near the Governor Clinton Hotel, into a modern Masonic Temple is progressing and it is expected that the Temple will be ready when the two Masonic lodges resume regular communications in the fall.

On October 8, 1929, Rondout Lodge celebrated its 75th anniversary with a dinner served in the chapel of the Rondout Presbyterian Church, which was followed by the anniversary services in the church auditorium.

Grand Master John A. Dutton and Deputy Grand Master Charles H. Johnson, of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of New York, were guests of honor at the celebration.

Attorney Robert G. Groves, Master of Rondout Lodge, presided at the anniversary services.

Women are collecting Spode. Not because it is antique. Spode is ageless! But because they covet all its patterns. They come to us for a cup and saucer in each, and when they serve coffee to their friends—every guest has a different pattern to admire! (Mixing Spode colors and designs is an imaginative new idea.)

Women eager to possess Spode will be glad to hear we have just received three more famous patterns—Anne Hathaway, Camilla, and Mayflower. The colors are blue, orchid, and ivory-white. The new lower prices (a reduction of approximately 20 per cent) are still in effect. Decide to get your Spode now. We'll arrange budget payments if you like.

Can you, then, think of anything more appropriate than to fly the flag from your home on Flag Day, June 14? The American flag is an expression of love of country and appreciation of the blessings of 'life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," enjoyed by those living in the home, under the protection of that flag? So if you have a flag in your home, see that it is displayed properly on Wednesday, June 14, from sunrise to sunset. If you haven't a flag get one without delay and display it as suggested."

Moral: Freeman ads can make shopping easier!

Locating the best shopping values by searching each store for them is like hunting the proverbial needle in the haystack by removing a straw at a time. It's apt to be a tiresome nerve wracking and time wasting procedure in any case. And an unnecessary one as well.

Kingston stores offer many sound values — there's no gainsaying that. But ordinarily some one store features several outstanding bargains which could be hidden in the haystack of its tremendous stock of merchandise.

The best way to find a needle in a haystack is to use a magnet. And, as a corollary, the best way to find "best buys" is to use a magnet — the Freeman Ads. You'll save yourself time, trouble, and money by using this handy value-magnet to plan your shopping!

Grunies Rally in 5th, 6th League Innings Scoring Tie with Independents 8-8

Battling to a sensational 8-8 standstill, Grunewalds and the Independents staged a dramatic diamond duel last night at the Athletic Field. Trailing 7-0, Grunewalds punched over eight markers in the fifth and sixth routing Bud Swarthout in a real old "blood and thunder" battle.

With Jackie Strubel, who throttled the Powerhouse in a brilliant relief performance, after replacing Joe Mahar, on the verge of defeating the Indies in the gathering dusk, Lay rapped a long looper to right center. Lay pulled up at third with two away as a desperate relay prevented a score and Knights was inserted as a pinch runner. Mains lashed a high fly to center and the dramatic action reached a frenzied climax as Smedes raced for the pile. Stumbling and staggering in the dusk, Smedes recovered balance, set himself for the catch, and the crowd groaned as the ball trickled to the ground. Knight scoring the tying run. Dawkins popped to Dulin as an anti-climax to the last half's four-star thriller.

Grunies Stage Rally

Trailing 7-3, Grunies five-run sixth inning massacre routed Bud Swarthout who had hurled a brilliant 10-strikeout, six hit performance. Swarthout's wildness resulted in his being derided for "Schoolboy" Bush who managed to stagger through the inning after Swarthout departed with the count 7-5. Dulin whiffed but Gil Kelder touched off the spark that fired the Grunies powderkeg. With Lamb and Mahar "jockeying" in spectacular style, Swarthout "blew" sky high and walked Minasian, Hanley, Strubel and Sleight. With the crowd screaming for the Indies scalp, Swarthout departed ahead 7-5 and Bush took over. Lamb trickled a high bouncer to Stumpf and two runs scored as confusion reigned as Addie bobbed the ball. Purvis fanned for the second out but Smedes walked and Grunies forged ahead 8-7 when Smedes outraced McLean's toss to Beck for the last out. Sleight scoring, Kelder's hard rap was smothered, McLean, to Van Eiten.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)

If Detroit's Tommy Bridges has any political leanings, this certainly is an opportune time for him to announce for office. That four-hit 3-4 pitching masterpiece he turned in yesterday against the Yankees—the first time they have been shut out since the Browns did it June 18, 1938—has made him baseball's man of the moment. The votes he'd get from other members of the harassed American League pitching corps would give him a pretty fair head start on any other candidate.

The downfall of the Yankees (actually their eighth loss in 41 games—added some fire to what Coach Del Baker of the Tigers has said publicly—that he'd battle 'em to the last ditch and concede 'em nothing).

While Messrs. Greenberg, Higgins, Fox and Rogell are reviving hopes of making a race out of the American League, the siege guns of the National League, the Cincinnati Reds, boomed ominously again.

As Bucky Walters was limiting the New York Giants to seven hits his mates were kicking three Giant hurlers all over the Polo Grounds, fashioning 16 hits into an impressive 8-2 victory. It was their 18th in their last 22 starts.

The Yankee defeat gave the second place Red Sox a chance to move up a game in the percentage column, but the Sox didn't grasp it, largely because they couldn't solve the offerings of Cleveland's Johnny Allen. Johnny scored a 7-5 victory by keeping most of 13 hits on the scratchy side. He got some help from Earl Averill who banged out his first homer of the season, with two aboard.

The third place White Sox took a cue from the three-hit pitching of Jack Knott and whacked out a 12-1 victory over the none-too-agile Athletics. A couple of homers by Gee Walker and Ollie Bejma, helped Jack to his first victory in five starts.

Washington and the St. Louis Browns were idle.

Though the rambunctious Reds seem to have a monopoly on the headlines in their circuit, there were some other noteworthy happenings. The seven-hit pitching exhibition put on by Brooklyn's Vito Tamulis was good enough to pace the Flatbushers to a 6-2 win over the Pirates from Pittsburgh.

The Buc almost got to Vito in the sixth but he weathered that storm and is able to point to his third victory of the year. Truett Sewell didn't find the going quite so smooth and was excused along about the fourth inning, in favor of Mace Brown, who finished for the Buc.

Like Sewell, the St. Louis Cardinals weren't treated any too well. Max West and Rookie Eddie Miller helped themselves to three homers (West got two) and paced the Boston Bees to a 10-4 victory.

Larry French, Charlie Root and Gene Lillard of the Chicago Cubs were punched around for 13 hits by the Phillies, enough for an 8-7 Philadelphia victory. French was charged with the loss. Dizzy Dean pitched the eighth and didn't allow a hit.

Federation League

The Congregationalists, who lead the Federation League along with the Presbyterians, each with seven wins and but one loss, came close to missing out Monday evening when they played a rejuvenated St. James team. With the score 2 to 0 in favor of St. James the Congregationalists went into the last half of the seventh inning and loaded the bases and then proceeded to put on the heat and push over three runs to make the final score 3 to 2 in favor of the Congregational team. There was no home run hitting but a series of events led to the defeat of the Methodist players. Clinton Avenue won 11 to 2 over Albany Avenue Baptists and Fair Street Hurley by a score of 16 to 3.

This evening the games are: Trinity vs. Wurts Street Baptists at Hasbrouck Park; Trinity M. E. vs. Port Ewen at armory; and Redeemer vs. Ulster Park at Barman. Wednesday evening Clinton Avenue plays Hurley and the Fair Street Church will battle the leading Congregationalists.

Gaining control of his screw-ball was what made Carl Hubbell a great pitcher, according to the Giants' southpaw ace himself. Carl says he could break the ball a lot wider at 20 than at 30, but at 30 he really had it working for him because he could control it. That was the year—1933—in which he pitched a six-hit 18 inning shutout of the St. Louis Cardinals, ran up a streak of 46 scoreless innings for a new all-time National League record, and in the All-Star game fanned Ruth, Gehrig, Fox, Simmons and Cronin, in succession.

Best line on the improved power of the Boston Bees is that it took a 3-hit shutout job by Dizzy Dean to give them their first whitewash of the season. When Old Dizzy turned the trick May 21, every other National League club except the St. Louis Cardinals had been blanked at least once.

Secret of Ernie Lombardi's preeminence in National League batting circles is that the Cincy Red siege-gun doesn't care what sky-line he's battling against. His road batting average every year compares well with his Crosley Field figures. Last year Brooklyn was the only hostile city in which he batted lower than .300. Chicago was tops with .444.

Sheriff Warns Brooklyn Dodgers

New York, June 6 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers—and their fans—had better be good from now on; the sheriff is watching 'em.

Sheriff James V. Mangano of Kings county, after reading about the arguments and scraps among the fans Thursday night when some of those in the unreserved seats rushed into a small reserved section and refused to move out when the ticket holders appeared, sent a letter to Larry MacPhail, Dodgers' president, yesterday, saying he might stop night bus ball at Ebbets Field if such disorders were repeated.

"It is obvious that these disorders were a direct result of your failure and inability to cope with a situation which, with adequate attendants, would not have given rise to the unfortunate consequences arising therefrom," Mangano wrote. He added he would have men at tomorrow night's Brooklyn-St. Louis game to observe conditions.

It was Blake's sixth professional fight and he made up in speed and stamina for what he lacked in experience. His left jab had the former champion's face a bloody mess as early as the third round.

The ex-champ rocked his younger opponent in the ninth and tenth rounds as he tried desperately for a knockout, but he was never able to catch the elusive Blake with the payoff punch.

Canzoneri weighed 140½, Blake 134.

Some Game!

Springfield, Ill., June 6 (AP)—Scorer Frank Wein was still a bit dizzy today from the job of tabulating hits and runs in the game between Springfield and Decatur in the Three-Eye Baseball League. His score book showed the following statistics for the nine inning game which Decatur won 15 to 10: Nine home runs, two triples, seven doubles and 15 singles—the total of 71 bases hammered off the six pitchers used in the slugfest.

Paul Derringer is the apple of Manager Bill McKechnie's eye because, as dean of the Cincinnati Reds' pitching staff, Oom Paul is a marvelous object lesson in control to the younger members. Last year he walked only 49 in his 307 innings pitched, less than one pass every six innings. He started this year's National League campaign in even finer fettle walking only six in his first 60 innings pitched.
